FIGHT TO SAVE THE 50

House Leaders Try to Ward Off Further Publicity in Bribery Scandal---Party Lash Applied to Force Representatives to Accept Star Chamber Findings.

The fight upon the acceptance of the "bribery" report of the Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives is on, with every indication of a quick decision and a victory for the committee. This means the expulsion of Representative Gethro and censuring of Representative Swig.

Speaker Cole, as head of the investigating committee, is taking the floor in person to force the report through. The best posted members feel certain that he can whip a majority into line for an early vote in his favor.

An attempt will be strenuously made to prevent the House as a body from going back of the committee's report. Such an investigation would reopen the whole line of inquiry. It might produce evidence as to the block of fifty regarding which Representative Mock testified and as to which he was not asked a single question.

This must be prevented at all hazards.

A Republican leader who is not always with the machine said this, at the time of the House opening, asking that his name be not published.

Demand for the Evidence.

"We shall make the best fight we can, although whether we shall get a vote or a roll call I do not know. Members generally feel that they ought not to be asked to pass upon so important a matter as this without an opportunity to see the testimony upon which they are convicting. It is urged, however, that it is impractical to print all the evidence, so I suppose we shall be defeated.

"The Committee on Rules, I expect, will argue that the House ought to have sufficient confidence in the body which it appointed to do the investigating to stand behind its report. I, for one, however, believe that we ought not to take such drastic action without seeing the evidence. This is especially true in the case of Swig. We all know he lied, but there are others whose evidence would show they were just as bad."

Although the House did not sit to-day until 1 o'clock, the members began to arrive at the State House very early and there ensued one of the most remarkable scenes ever witnessed there.

They swarmed into the State Library and soon had possession of all the twenty volumes in which the testimony before the committee appears. Three and four members were reading each book at a time, indicating strongly what truth there was in the committee's contention that such a star chamber session actually resulted in the later "publicity" of its doings.

Fight Begins Early.

As soon as the House opened the fight began. The Republican party whip was very much in evidence, to oblige members to support the committee.

Representative Frank J. Gethro, whose expulsion has been recommended, is not taking his punishment supinely. Prominent Democrats, headed by Mellen and Lomasney, have conferred with members of both parties who are not in favor of having the whole matter hushed up by the punishment of but one or two persons, and a plan is on foot to cross-examine the members of the committee themselves on their method of holding their star chamber investigation and preparing their whitewash report.

Gethro and his friends will demand that before judgment is passed on his case the entire House have an opportunity to read a transcript of the evidence taken before the committee, or at last of all that refers to the Boston representative whose seat is in danger.

"Hear All the Evidence."

Many members of the House, remembering that the committee has compared itself to a Grand Jury, whose duty it was to find a presentment on the evidence and then submit the whole question to the House, are saying that it is not the fashion of the upper court to find a person guilty on the say-so of the Grand Jury, but that after the indictment has been found the jury hears all the evidence and gives the accused an opportunity to be heard in his own defence.

Those who will support Gethro will not be solely composed of his personal and political friends, but many are expected to rally to his support in the sole interest of fair play.

"BOB" SOUTHWORTH CAN'T REMEMBER

The evidence of Lobbyist "Bob" Southworth before the bribery investigating committee was principally interesting for what Mr. Southworth could not remember about the matters he has been interested in during the present session of the Legislature. Mr. Southworth swore that he was employed only by the Boston & Maine Railroad, and that his work on other bills had been entirely of his own volition. He remembered that he had taken an interest in the bill to pension probate judges, but failed to remember that he had any share in the overtime bill's fate or any other specific measure except such as related to the Boston & Maine road.

The evidence follows:

Robert A. Southworth, sworn.

Q.—By Mr. Hall—What is your full name? A.—Robert A. Southworth.

Q.—And where do you live? A.—I live in Brookline.

Q.—And your place of business? A.—Boston.

Q.—Where? A.—No. 50 Congress street.

Q.—What is your business? A.—A member of the bar.

Q.—Do you at any time during the sessions of the Legislature give any part of your time or experience to legislative matters? A.—This year I have. I am registered counsel of the Boston & Maine road.

Takes Orders from Tuttle.

Q.—Have you this year registered for any other person or corporation than the Boston & Maine road? A.—I have not.

Q.—From whom connected with the Boston & Maine road do you take orders relative to the matters at the State House? A.—I take orders from the president of the road, Mr. Tuttle.

Q.—Any other person? A.—In his absence, Mr. Coolidge.

Q.—And Mr. Coolidge is an attorney? A.—He is counsel for the Boston & Maine Railroad.

Q.—What matters have you this year been interested in as legislative agent? A.—I have been at the State House constantly since the first of January on the report of the special commission that sat during the recess last year which has been referred to the joint committee on railroads and street railways.

Q.—I ask you what your functions are as a legislative counsel in connection with your employment by the Boston & Maine railroad? A.—Well, my general functions are to report to my superior officers the situation and condition of rail matters as affecting the Boston & Maine corporation, or any other matters that affect the Boston & Maine corporation.

Interested in Judges' Bill.

Q.—Have you been interested in any other legislation? A.—I can't say whether I have or not. If I have, two or three matters, possibly.

Q.—What are they? A. Well, I have in mind now the bill for the placing of the probate judges on the pension list. I have been interested in that in my own way personally and individually. I believe it is the proper thing as long as our judges are appointed for life; when they reach a certain age I believe they should be pensioned. That is a matter for which I myself, of my free will and accord, have taken upon myself to do all I can individually. I don't recall any other matter.

Q.—Did you do something on that? A.—In a general way, yes.

Q.—At the suggestion of any person? A.—Not a soul.

Q.—Have you spoken to any person whatsoever relative to any other matter of legislation at this session? A.—That I don't recall; possibly.

Q.—Upon what bill, if you did? A.—I have no special recollection of any bill; it is very possible I have on many bills.

Q.—But if you did on any bills you did it purely for your own interests? A.—Absolutely.

Q.—Does the fact that you are a registered counsel for a particular interest in anyway make you at all hesitant to mix up in other matters of legislation? A.—I never hesitate on anything, in the way that I would be afraid. I don't know as I understand your question. I don't know as I know exactly what you mean. If there is an innuendo there I don't understand it.

Q.—There isn't an innuendo there; I am simply asking you relative to your business. As I understand it you are a legislative counsel for the Boston & Maine road? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You spend half of your year almost exclusively at that employment in the State House. A.—That is true.

Q.—And I presume—with your permission—that it is a source of some income to you? Am I correct in that? A.—I don't understand what you mean to ask me; am I paid for doing this business?

Q.—Why certainly? A.—Why, certainly I am.

Q.—Then I say, that being the situation, does that situation and that condition make you at all hesitant from interesting yourself personally without compensation in other matters of legislation? A.—I shouldn't hesitate to say or do anything that I wished.

"May Have Talked with Members."

Q.—What other matters of legislation were you specially interested in? A.—No other matters were I specially interested in.

Q.—Then, that being so, and your personal interest being the only reason why you should approach a member, will you now say to me that you did not approach any member on any other matters? A.—No, I don't say any such thing. I may have talked with a member on a great many other things. * * *

Q.—And now you cannot tell the committee any of the matters you were interested in at all? A.—I cannot, sir.

Q.—And yet you took occasion to speak to members. A.—Why shouldn't I?

Q.—I am asking the question—as I say you took occasion to speak to members? A.—Yes, I think that is very true. If I have committed a great crime in speaking to members on matters I am very sorry for it.

DECLARES BRIBERY REPORT CENSORED

That the evidence taken before the Committee on Rules in the bribery investigation was censored, and at least several sentences taken from it before it appeared in its present form, on file in the State Library, is the sensational charge made today by the Boston Traveler.

If it is true that two or three sentences could fail to appear in one witness' evidence, the possibilities involved will be clear to every person.

This is the charge made by the Traveler:

When the State House reporter of the Traveler was before the Committee on Rules, Speaker Cole, before the conclusion of the testimony asked:

"Of course, you understand you are not to print anything regarding what you have heard or testified to while before this committee?"

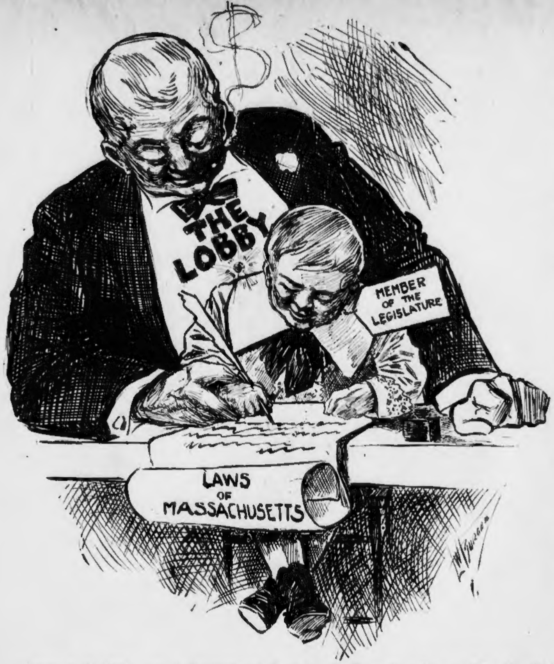
The Traveler reporter asked for a ruling as to his legal rights, and was answered by speaker cole.

NO RECORD OF THIS APEARS IN THE TRANSCRIPT OF THE EVIDENCE FILED WITH THE STATE LIBRARIAN.

100,000-GALLON LEAK.

PROVIDENCE, June 19.—The Hope street reservoir, which supplies the city with water, is leaking at the rate of 100,000 gallons a day and will probably have to be emptied for repairs.

"The Author."



Lawyer I. R. Clark, counsel for Quinlan & Co., before the House Committee on Rules, identified two of the amendments to the "Bucketshop bill" as ones which he had himself drawn and submitted to his employers. These were later offered by members of the House.

State Police Trying to Solve Mystery of

CHAUFFEUR KILLING

An Investigation Begun of Strange Shooting in Home of Rich Widow.

Special to the Boston American.

NORTH ANDOVER, June 19.—District Attorney Peters and the State Police have to-day begun an investigation of the mysterious killing of Reginald Stafford, the chauffeur and favorite attendant of the wealthy widow, Mrs. Ellen Sutton. An inquest is to be held, and State Officer Wells of Lynn arrived here this morning, after a consultation yesterday between Mr. Peters and the chief of the State Police.

Stafford was shot ten days ago by Edward Ruby, butler at the Hill Crest mansion. Ruby is now well on his way across the ocean. He says he shot Stafford for a burglar. He was guarding the gold and silver plate in the dining room, valued at $10,000, and was armed with a revolver. At the hearing the court discharged Ruby, declaring that he had done his duty as a servant.

State Officer Wells started to-day to dig up all the facts of the crime at the place where it was committed. Early in the forenoon he called at the Hill Crest House.

The drawing room, the scene of the killing, was first gone over. It was here that Ruby said he shot Stafford, while the latter was hiding behind a sofa. His first attempt was to find out where the young man was killed. Behind the sofa there are no blood spots, but in the middle of the room there are several spots on the carpet, as well as on a chair.

Testimony at the hearing went to show that an attempt had been made to wipe away these blood spots, which are far away from where the body was found.

From Mrs. Sutton herself Officer Wells will try to learn the secret of the mystery. It has been hinted that jealousy among the other servants over favoritism shown Stafford may be responsible for his death.

In a gold watch which Stafford owned, and which was given him by Mrs. Sutton, is a portrait of Mrs. Sutton, taken some years ago, when she was an attractive young woman of twenty-five, the same age as the chauffeur.

Mrs. Sutton, with her daughter, Mrs. John H. Scoville of New York, is secluded in the mansion, and thus far they have refused to see any person outside the family circle.

QUESTION SEVEN WOMEN.

Mrs. Scoville will also be seen by Officer Wells. Seven women servants in the house will be plied with questions also, in an effort to find out if there was sufficient ill-feeling between Ruby and Stafford to result in such a tragedy.

J. D. Orlando, the assistant butler, who was behind Ruby at the time Stafford was killed, will be questioned as to whether the body was dragged about the room after the shooting and whether he knows about an attempt to wipe up the blood spots on the carpet.

The rugs in the drawing room were tossed about and a vase had been knocked to the floor and broken at the time of the shooting. Orlando will be asked if there was a struggle, a fight, between Stafford and Ruby, and if any words passed between them.

An attempt will also be made to find out how the glass door leading from the drawing room to the veranda was opened, where Stafford had keys which would open it, and whether he might not have really been going out instead of coming in at the time.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY BUSY.

District Attorney W. Scott Peters is working with state police. As soon as the investigation into the shooting has progressed sufficiently a judicial inquest will be held. This inquest will be held in Lawrence. Everyone in anyway connected with the house at the time of the shooting will be summoned as a witness. Whether Ruby will be taken into custody upon his arrival in England has not been determined.

When Ruby was brought before the court only a few witnesses were present. Neither Mrs. Sutton nor Mrs. Scoville was there. The two brothers of Stafford, who came on to care for the body, believed there was something suspicious in the killing of their kin. They pleaded with Judge Frye to hold the case until the funeral was over, so that a short investigation might be made, but this was refused them.

12 MEN ADRIFT AT SEA; 6 DORIES LOST IN FOG

FEAR THAT CREW OF FISHERMAN HAVE BEEN DROWNED OFF CHATHAM.

Twelve men of the fishing schooner Philip P. Manta were lost in the fog in the South Channel, thirty miles southeast of Chatham, Sunday, and it is feared by the skipper, Captain Tony King, that none of them has reached shore. They are in six dories, two men in each boat.

The Manta arrived at T wharf to-day with her flag at half-mast and only six men aboard instead of the eighteen who started out on the fishing trip. The names of the missing, all of whom belong in Provincetown, are:

KING, JOHN, brother of the skipper.
LISBON, MANUEL.
BATTALIME, ANTONIO.
ENOS, ALFRED.
SILVA, ANDREAS.
GABRAL, MANUEL.
SIRZA, JOSEPH.
COSTA, JOSEPH.
RICA, ANTONIO.
SUERTA, JESSE.
GABRAL, ANTONIO.
COSTA, ANTONIO.

Entire Crew Goes Out.

An hour before forenoon Sunday the entire crew of fishermen started out in their six dories for the trawls, leaving only the captain and cook aboard. Captain King said that he told the men on account of the thick fog not to go beyond the sound of the conch.

The conch was kept going during the afternoon. The fog hung heavy all about the ship and increased in density. At 4 o'clock two dories with two men in each showed up.

The men on the ship took turns working the conch during the night and Monday. Then they cruised about endeavoring to pick up the men at distant points. Not a trace of them was obtained and no other fishing schooner was sighted until later Monday, when, giving up the search, Captain King turned his ship toward T wharf.

Attempt at Rescue Fails.

On the way they sighted the schooner Julia Costa. The skipper said that during the night he had heard the conch of one of the dories going and had replied, but he was unable to get the men to the ship. The Costa also kept watch for the missing fishermen.

Captain King has hopes that the men may have been picked up, but owing to the thickness of the fog he believes that they must have been blown out to sea.

GIRL'S LETTERS TRACE FUGITIVE

Through letters of his sweetheart, whose name is closely guarded, Lynn police to-day traced to Gorham, N. H., Frank Sawyer, wanted for two years on a charge of embezzling $1,000 from Eli W. Bacon & Co., Lynn grain dealers. Sawyer has been arrested by Sheriff Stevens of Gorham and will be brought to Lynn for arraignment to-morrow. The young woman in Lynn has kept up a correspondence with Sawyer since his disappearance.

CONFIRMS PLOT ON ROOSEVELT

PORTLAND, Or., June 19.—Statements made by Walter Sealaszkiwcz, formerly president of the Polish National Society, seem to confirm a recent report that this city harbors an anarchistic society which contemplates the assassination of President Roosevelt.

Sealaszkiwcz's statements were made to the police yesterday while he was securing warrants for several members of his society, who, he alleges, attacked and beat him Sunday night for objecting to an alleged misuse of the society's funds. Sealaszkiwcz states that there are about 80 anarchists in the city, and that they hold regular meetings at places northeast of Portland.

CLEAVER VICTIM MAY RECOVER

HOLBROOK, June 19.—Hopes are now entertained for the recovery of Zenas A. French, the school committeeman who was assaulted by Charles Theobald with a meat cleaver during a dispute over a bill of $1.20. Surgeons have removed the pieces of bone which were pressing against the brain and Mr. French is resting comfortably.

Theobald has been unable to procure bail, and is in jail at Dedham.

INSPECTION OF MEAT BILL IS BEFORE HOUSE

Provision Included in Agricultural Appropriation Measure Reported To-day.

APPROVED BY PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, June 19.—In the House to-day Representative Wadsworth of New York, chairman of the House committee on agriculture, reported the agricultural appropriation bill, with the new provision on meat inspection, as agreed on yesterday and approved by President Roosevelt as well as Speaker Cannon.

It was referred to the committee on the whole House on the State of the Union. It is the intention to pass it to-day.

CURE FOUND FOR DREADED MENINGITIS

New York Doctor Uses Hot Bath Massage, Ergot and Whiskey.

NEW YORK, June 19.—A cure for cerebro-spinal meningitis, or "spotted fever," has been discovered, according to his own statement, by Dr. Joseph W. Goldsmith of the Long Island College Hospital. Authoritative announcement has been made by Dr. Goldsmith's superiors that the young surgeon has already successfully cured ten out of twelve cases of the most virulent sort.

Prior to the experiments of Dr. Goldsmith the disease was considered practically incurable, and although various isolated instances were recorded of successful treatments, no one remedy had been discovered that could be applied with general good results.

The Goldsmith treatment is a model of systematic simplicity. Last night Dr. Goldsmith outlined it to an American reporter, as follows:

Baths, Massage and Whiskey.

"The patient is given two baths per day at a temperature of 110 degrees Fahrenheit. The physical condition of the sufferer is such that the excessive heat affords no sensation of pain because of the numbness characteristic of the malady.

"The patient while in the bath is given a strenuous massage in order to circulate the blood and bring the limbs back to normal condition. A liquid diet is given at short intervals. It consists of small quantities of whiskey and ergot. The ergot brings about an equilibrium of the circulation of the blood, which increases the activity of the leucocytes cells, which war upon the germs of meningitis and eventually destroy them."

Experimented on Immigrants.

Dr. Goldsmith's discovery resulted from many experiments upon meningitis sufferers brought to the hospital from Ellis Island. The hospital has a contract with the Federal Government for caring for sick immigrants.

One of Dr. Goldsmith's first patients was a seven-year-old Russian lad, who arrived here on the Graf Waldersee on March 29. The boy's case was one of the greatest virulence, but despite his condition Dr. Goldsmith discharged him as cured several weeks ago. He is now living with his sister, a Mrs. Lischinsky, at No. 140 Grand street, Manhattan. Two Greeks, named Lysander Popolis and Dominico Ignazzo, were among others successfully treated.

A striking feature of the Goldsmith cure is that the discharged patients have escaped permanent deformities of mind or person.

ATE POISONED SAUSAGE; 4 DEAD

FORT SMITH, Ark., June 19.—J. B. Barmore, a farmer near this city, his two young daughters, and baby son are dead in Belle Point Hospital, poisoned by eating bologna sausage at supper Thursday night. Mrs. Barmore, who ate of all things on the table except the sausage, was not even ill.

The sausage was the ordinary packing house kind sold by meat dealers. It was purchased by Barmore out of the original stamped package from a street vender of luncheons. The time that elapsed between the purchase of the sausage and the fatal termination of the illness made it impossible for the authorities to locate the particular box in which the stuff was packed.

FINISH STEEL PASSENGER CAR

PITTSBURG, June 19.—The Pressed Steel Car Company here has turned out what is said to be the first steel passenger coach made for any big railroad. It is one of three for the Southern railway. Only the interior finish is made of wood.

The floor is composed of one-eighth inch steel plates, upon which are laid two courses of wooden flooring, each three-quarters of an inch thick, with heavy felt paper between. The floor is covered with heavy linoleum.

The framing at the ends consists of angles at the corners and of three channels reinforced with plates on each side of the door.

CORPSE ON ENGINE FRONT, CARRIED MILES

DUNKIRK, N. Y., June 19.—The lifeless body of George Frank of Erie, Pa., was found sitting upright on the pilot of the engine drawing the Twentieth Century limited when the train was flagged at Union Depot early this morning. His eyes were wide open, and in one hand he held a whip. His legs were wedged in between the slats of the pilot. The remains were sent back to Erie. A carriage containing the man was struck by the engine at Erie.

HIDES KIDNAPPED GIRLS IN FEAR OF BRITISH ENVOY

REITA SULLY, MALDEN GIRL KIDNAPPED.

Mrs. Bella Fenwick Prepares for Fight to Retain Custody of Malden Man's Children.

Fearing that her two nieces whom she kidnapped would be taken from her by the action of the British Ambassador through representations made by John Sully of Malden, father of the girls, Mrs. Bella Fenwick of Denver, Col., has placed the children in the care of a friend. Denver dispatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN say she does not know their present whereabouts.

Mrs. Fenwick has secured the aid of powerful friends. She is backed by Governor Jesse McDonald of Colorado, who refused to honor the requisition papers of Governor Guild for Mrs. Fenwick and the children; by Judge Benjamin B. Lindsay of the Denver juvenile court, and Colorado's Washington representatives.

Offered Funds to Protect Herself.

Funds to protect herself and the children have been offered to Mrs. Fenwick. A wealthy resident of Denver, Mrs. J. B. F. Reynolds, has been given the custody of the children and is said to have them safely in hiding, where, even Mrs. Fenwick does not know.

Reita Sully, the child who was taken from the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Bishop of Malden by Mrs. Fenwick, for which effort she was indicted, is suffering from a serious throat trouble. According to statements made by Mrs. Fenwick, the child's life would be endangered if she were to be taken from Colorado at this time.

John Sully, after the efforts of the Malden and Massachusetts authorities to secure his children proved unsuccessful, appealed to Consul-General Wyndham, the representative of the English government in Boston, who placed the matter before Sir Mortimer Durand, the British Ambassador.

Appeals as British Subject.

Sully made his appeal as a British subject.

Mrs. Fenwick says that she is willing to undergo any torture if she may keep her dead sister's children. She maintains that neither Mabel nor Reita desires to leave her; that they have a good home, and will be brought up with the best of care.

Governor McDonald is awaiting any possible action by the British representatives. "I cannot say offhand," he remarked, "but I do not believe that the British consul has any authority in the matter."

BIG ADDITION TO DOUGLAS PLANT IS DEDICATED

Former Governor Welcomes Guests and Escorts Them Through Shoe Factory.

BROCKTON, June 19.—The new administrative building and jobbing house of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Company, erected as part of is mammoth shoe plant at Montello, was dedicated to-day.

The three factories as well as the new building were open for inspection, and visitors were received and escorted through the industrial maze by Ex-Governor Douglass the heads of departments. Fifteen thousand invitations were sent out, including over 11,000 to the retail dealers in the United States who handle the W. L. Douglas shoes.

The enormous growth of the business had resulted in inability to turn out orders in time to accommodate the trade. There will now be increased space in one of the factories, following the removal of the offices to the new building. This is 200 feet long and 60 feet wide and two stories high. The jobbing department will occupy the entire lower floor and the offices the second.

There will be a finely-appointed sample room on the second floor, with an office in which both telephone and telegraph will be installed, with operators, both Western Union and Postal Telegraph wires being used. The jobbing department will be under the management of W. F. Armstrong, formerly with Batchelder & Lincoln of Boston.

On the second floor there is a large hall called the Atrium, planned and decorated in the manner of the central apartment of a Pompeiian house. Around the Atrium are placed the private offices, finished and furnished in mahogany.

In the directors' room is a fine portrait in oil of Mr. Douglas, the president.

MEXICO SUSPICIOUS OF U. S. CANNED GOODS

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, June 19.—The Mexican government is about to begin inspection of canned meats imported from the United States.

MASONS ARE WELCOMED BY GOVERNOR

Thirty-third Triennial Conclave Opens Here for First Time in Fifty-four Years.

Governor Curtis Guild, himself a member of the fraternity, in Masonic Temple to-day welcomed to Massachusetts the thirty-third triennial convocation of the General Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of the United States. Welcome was also extended in behalf of the Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Massachusetts, which had been called in special convocation for the purpose, by Grand High Priest Harry Hunt of Melrose.

General Grand High Priest Arthur G. Pollard of Lowell responded to the addresses of welcome, also Deputy General Grand High Priest Joseph E. Dyas of Paris, Ill. Brief addresses were also made by General Grand King William C. Swain of Milwaukee and General Scribe Nathan Kingsley of Austin, Minn.

The present convocation of the General Grand Chapter in Boston, which is the first to be held here since 1850, derives especial interest from the fact that the present head of the body is a Massachusetts Mason, who has held high office in all the Masonic bodies in this State. General Grand High Priest Pollard is a past grand high priest of the Grand Chapter, past deputy grand master of the Grand Council and a past deputy grand master of the Grand Lodge. He is also prominent in the Scottish Rite, having received the thirty-third degree in 1895.

The General Grand Chapter will hold morning and afternoon sessions, with the exception of Wednesday afternoon, until the business of the convocation is concluded. To-night the Grand Chapter will tender a reception in Masonic Temple to the visiting companions and the ladies accompanying them. This morning the ladies were given a trolley ride to Lexington and Concord, Harvard University and its environments.

To-morrow morning the ladies will be taken for an auto ride through the park system, and in the afternoon for an excursion down the harbor. Wednesday evening a reception will be given at the Brunswick by General and Mrs. Pollard, and on Thursday evening the festivities will be concluded by a banquet in Tremont Temple. "Freemasonry as a World Power" will be discussed by Rev. William H. Van Allen, S. T. D., rector of the Church of the Advent, Boston, Past Grand Master Charles T. Gallagher and former Governor John L. Bates.

APPEAL TO THE PUBLIC TO SAVE TUCKER HOME

Start Petition for Popular Subscription to Lift $2,000 Mortgage.

William Peel of No. 10½ Common street, asked by several sympathizers with the family of Charles L. Tucker to assist in raising the mortgaeg on the Tucker home at Auburndale, has started a popular subscription toward that end.

The mortgage on the Tucker home amounts to $2,000. Mr. Peel believes that this can be paid off by friends of the family, and the aged father and mother permitted to end their days in peace.

To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter today Mr. Peel outlined his plan. He believes that by getting out a number of subscription papers and placing them where they are easy of access he will secure many signatures for small amounts which in the end will amount to a goodly sum.

"There are many people in New England who believe that an injustice was done Charles L. Tucker," said Mr. Peel. "Those who labored to secure a commutation of the sentence now want to do something to help the family. I have received many letters asking me to take up this work. I believe it can be done."

LOST 7 FINGERS BY BIG CRACKER

A TIP-TOP LABEL WAS WORTH $10 TO A BRIGHT BOSTON WOMAN

Mrs. Edward F. Hogan Proved That She Was a Discriminating Buyer, and She Received This Award From Ward-Corby Co., Makers of Ward's Tip-Top Bread.

This Educational Campaign to Impress the Trade Mark on the Minds of the Purchasers Seems to be an Excellent Thing, Not Only for the Consumer, But for Tip-Top and All Other Advertised Products.

One of the happiest women in Greater Boston to-day is Mrs. Edward F. Hogan of 71 East Dedham street.

Mrs. Hogan received $10 from the Ward-Corby Co. for proving that she was familiar with the Red, White and Blue label.

Ward-Corby Co. make an extraordinary good loaf of bread and advertise it extensively.

They have found that when a substitution is offered, they not only lose that sale, but lose a great many others from the same person, because the substitution is of an inferior kind. This means not only the loss of a sale of Tip-Top, but that which is of far greater value to them—their reputation for making the very highest grade bread.

The present campaign of advertising has been covered along on educational lines, and in many advertisements the Ward-Corby Co. has endeavored to impress on the public the necessity of discriminating, making themselves familiar with their Tip-Top label that is attached to every loaf of bread that they purchase.

The impression this has made on the public mind can be gathered from the story of Mr. Edward Hogan, who brought the winning label, B 347501, to the bakery.

"We noticed the advertisements of Ward's Tip-Top," said he, "and our attention was called to it at the grocery by the lady in charge. We trade at the Little Quincy Market, 11 Savoy St. We found it very fine bread—in fact, 'Tip-Top,' so we have continued to buy it every day.

"Mrs. Hogan always looked at the label to see that it was the genuine—for once having eaten of Tip-Top—so nice—so light—so tasty and palatable—no other would do. Then she noticed that the labels were numbered, and she began to put them away. We observed the numbers on the labels, and we noticed the advertisement of the company asking whether they had impressed upon the public the necessity of looking for their Tip-Top label, and offering a reward for labels bearing certain serial numbers that were issued on bread some two or three days previously.

"Saturday morning we looked through our labels and there, sure enough, was this label, B 347501, which was worth $10 to us.

"Say, we could hardly believe it. I've been out of work for three weeks—on strike. Few know there is four shoe factories out on strike in Lynn.

"You bet this ten will come in handy. We will have a dinner to-morrow that will make that day always stand out as a red-letter day.

"Of course, it is not only for the ten dollars that I am grateful, which is an acceptable present, but because it proved that we were of the intelligent purchasing public that do recognize goods by their identifying mark—the label."

Scott Tuffts, a bright-eyed, 15-year-old boy of 37 Webster ave., Somerville, brought in label B 354325 and received a dollar. He says that his folks are very fond of Tip-Top, and that they have it every meal.

His folks buy their bread from Grocer Timothy O'Brien, cor. Webster and Prospect sts., Somerville.

Scott held up the dollar as he was leaving the bakery and said: "See that; ma says I can have it to celebrate the Fourth, and you bet I'll have a good time."

QUAKER CITY MOTHERS CELEBRATE ARREST; CHURCHES OPENED TO THRONG

NEWSPAPER SLEUTHS TRAP KIDNAPPER OF MUTH BOY

Lad Runs to Mother's Arms, and Father, a Few Days Since Condemned by Associates, Is Now Regarded as Hero—Prisoner Tries to End Life.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—Safe in the arms of his mother, who has been seriously ill over his absence, Freddy Muth, the kidnapped son of a local jeweler, is safe at his home to-day. Locked up in a cell at the city jail is John Joseph Kean, the self-confessed abductor of the boy. Kean tried to drink poison when he was caught. When told that he was the victim of a clever newspaper trap his rage knew no bounds. Later he tried to end his life by hanging himself. He had hoped to get a rich ransom for the child.

Charles Muth, father of the stolen boy, a man who for a few days stood the condemnation of the city after it was published that he had only taken the boy to a relative, is now the most admired man in the city. Muth allowed himself to be regarded as a husband and father who had taken part in the abduction of his own child, and then sat calmly by and watched the grieving mother suffer. Now it is known that he was a party to a newspaper plot to throw the abductor off the track by these statements, made to the local press.

Thousands of Mothers Celebrate.

In less than an hour one hundred thousand mothers in this city knew of the capture of the kidnapper. The celebration of their joy put the great celebration of the birth of the Republican Party into obscurity. At 5 o'clock last night began a demonstration that spread through the city as rapidly as the news of the capture of Kean became known. One uptown church threw open its doors and held a special service of thanksgiving for the deliverance of the boy, and expressed its indignation toward the kidnapper.

The recovery of the boy and the capture of the man who stole him, mark one of the most extraordinary performances in detective and newspaper work ever recorded or ever conducted on such lines.

Charles Muth, the father of the stolen boy, took what might be termed "a thousand to one shot." He opened himself to the contumely of his neighbors, and the contempt of his business associates by having the announcement made that he had made a mistake, and that his boy was safe with relatives in Brooklyn or New Brunswick, N. J.

Newspapers Help the Scheme.

The Philadelphia newspapers made conspicuous the announcement that Muth regretted his early assertions, and was satisfied that his boy had not been kidnapped, but had been taken away as the result of a family quarrel. He emphasized that he had abandoned all idea of prosecution. The chief of detectives, James Donaghy, was quoted as denouncing Muth as a deceiver, and proclaiming loudly that he wanted nothing more to do with the jeweler for what he called a fake abduction.

Then the newspaper press of Philadelphia, with the aid of a New York paper, entered into a conspiracy to deceive the abductor into the belief that he would be immune from punishment if he would yield up Freddy Muth uninjured and unmutilated.

The Superintendent of Police and the Chief of Detectives had a conference. They called upon the editor of a morning newspaper for advice and suggestions.

Papers Form Plot.

The finality was the entering into a solemn compact by the editors of nine newspapers with an aggregate daily circulation of millions and millions of copies to refrain from publishing information regarding the abduction except for the purpose of deception, and to make every effort to lead the kidnappr to suspect that he was not under espionage.

An agreement was made that the daily publications, through the life of the agreement, should be confined to theories, and a class of theories intended to mislead the kidnapper into the belief that he was not suspected.

On the morning of the 17th Muth received under a special delivery a letter which read: "Have you kept faith with us? Now is your last chance. If not responded to at once—why, you know! One thousand dollars is needed."

Following the direction of the Chief of Detectives, Muth responded to this suggestion through a newspaper personal, in which he agreed to pay $1,000 for the restoration of his boy. He received the following letter in response:

"Your offer of $1,000 accepted. To show your honesty fold twenty $10 or ten $20 in a newspaper and address this to No. 58 North Front street, Philadelphia. In forty-eight hours you will get the boy home."

Muth was in constant touch with Captain Donaghy, and Donaghy with his newspaper confederates. The jeweller believed that publicity would be the proper thing, but the unusual spectacle was presented of nine newspaper editors advising against it. He published another personal and received another letter, which disturbed him greatly, as its serious tenor indicated that the kidnapper was losing patience.

Last Desperate Chance.

The last letter to Muth was written last night and contained the menace which led the jeweller to accept the desperate chance of luring the abductor into ambush, by pretending to call off the police.

The kidnapped boy is well and unharmed after his six days of confinement. Mrs. Muth is overcome with joy at her child's return. The torturing six days, when she knew not whether her boy was dead or alive, brought her near to the verge of mental collapse.

When it became known that the boy was safe everybody in the Muth store was requested to leave. When the cab containing Freddie and his father dashed up to the store the detail of police was scarcely able to manage the crowd.

The police formed a lane, and Freddie, school boys still clasped under his arm, jumped from the cab, followed by his father, making a rush for the door of the store. The police closed in behind and the door was locked.

"Where is my mamma?" was Freddie's first exclamation.

Last night Kean occupied a cell in the Central police station, with life imprisonment staring him in the face.

"They can't keep me in prison," he said. "There's more than one way of killing one's self."

Tries Suicide in Cell.

Kean, during the interval of changing school books still clasped under his arm, illuminated cell at City Hall, tried suicide. Tearing a hole in his trousers pocket, he quickly tore off length after length of shirt and underclothing and twisted it into twine-like strands. Then he joined the ends with stout knots.

The rope was untwisted and the police surgeon sent for. The kidnapper was revived.

Unless police calculations fail, by noon to-day Kean will have been indicted, tried, convicted and on his way to the penitentiary to serve out his life sentence.

Captain of Detectives Donaghy said last night that it was Kean who had threatened to kidnap the son of Banker George Huhn.

Made desperate by the fear of arrest for the theft of $400, Kean committed the crime of child-stealing. The inception of the plan was occasioned by his hearing one day on Columbia avenue Mrs. Muth calling out, "Freddie, don't go away." The thought immediately occurred to him that the parents would pay well to get the boy back were he stolen.

The most remarkable part of the abductor's confession is that while he held the Muth boy captive he tried twice to kidnap another child whose mother was reputed wealthy.

KIDNAPPER TELLS HOW HE STOLE BOY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—Following is Kidnapper's Kean's confession:

"My name is John Joseph Kean; I live at No. 415 Norton street, West Philadelphia. I am a married man, with a wife and three children. I was in debt, without any means of getting any money, and had used money belonging to Mr. Cook, by whom I was employed. I was looking in the window of Mr. Muth's jewelry store, and Freddie was sitting on the step. Some one called out, 'Freddie, do not go away,' when it occurred to me, 'How much would they give to get him back if he did go away?'

"It occurred to me that if I got Freddie away I would get a reward for his return and pay some of my debts.

"On Tuesday morning about nine o'clock I went down Market street in a car, but found I would have to get the boy away myself. I went to the postoffice, at Ninth and Market streets, and wrote the note which I sent to the teacher by the messenger boy. I had learned who the principal was by 'phoning to the school at Eighteenth and Oxford streets. I waited at Fifteenth and Master streets until the messenger boy brought Freddie to me. I had previously learned from a boy named Hagen, whom I had met at Fifteenth and Columbia avenue, that the boy's name was Freddie Muth and that he was in the lowest grade in school. I knew that his name was Freddie Muth, but I asked the boy Hagen so that I would be sure.

"When I met Freddie Muth at Fifteenth and Master streets I took him on the Fifteenth street car, and we rode to the Pennsylvania railroad station at Fifteenth and Market streets. I took him into the the station and bought him some picture books. We sat in the station about half an hour, and then went to Keith's Theatre, stayed there until the performance was over, about 10:30 p. m.

"While we were in the theatre I called up Mr. Muth's home on the 'phone, told him Freddie was in the neighborhood; would be back in an hour or so. Mrs. Muth answered the 'phone, called out to her husband, saying: 'Here's the man that has Freddie.' I then became frightened and dropped the 'phone. This, I think, was about 5 p. m.

"After the show was out we went to the Automat restaurant, on Chestnut street, below Ninth, where I got him something to eat. After leaving the restaurant we rode on different cars, until finally we got to Sixty-second street and Girard avenue, where we went into an oyster house.

"Freddie said he was cold and I put my hat and coat on him. We then got a Girard avenue car and rode around Gunner's Run and back again to Sixty-second street and Girard avenue, where we got off. I then went to my own home, leaving Freddie sitting on the steps opposite.

"My wife did not know that I was in the house. I took from my home a pillow, some clothes and an old cushion from a chair. I went into the vacant house at No. 428 Horton street. I had keys for all the houses in this square that were vacant, as I had been acting as an agent to rent them. I left the house No. 428 Horton street the same morning before daylight, as I realized the fact that the houses on each side of me being occupied, it might attract attention.

"After leaving No. 428 Horton street I went into the corner house. This house was not locked, and I was afraid to stay there. I then took Freddie into the third house. Hearing the policemen searching the closets and different places next door, we went out of the third house into the second house by the way of the back roof. I quieted Freddie by telling him that the agent was coming and would arrest us for being in his house. We stayed in this house until we were discovered by the officers and I was arrested.

"I went out of the house while Freddie was asleep to get food, and stole milk and bread from the steps in the neighborhood.

"During the period that we were in the house I gave Freddie two bottles of beer, a little at a time, as we had no water, and Freddie said he was used to getting beer at home.

Tried to Steal Another Boy.

"At one time, about two weeks ago, I sent a boy to Sixty-third street and Haverford avenue to try and entice a boy away named Philip Kolasky, who is five years of age, and who resided at Sixty-first and Callowhill streets, as his mother had boasted of having plenty of money. I thought if I could get him (Kolasky) away I could get some money. I could not get him as he was not there, neither the first nor second time that I went for him.

"I was never out in the daytime, and the letters that I had written I posted at night. I am forty-two years of age, was born in New York City, where I was in a stock broker's office. I came to Philadelphia about ten years ago, since which time I have been employed as an agent."

THINK HE HAD BOMBFORROSEN

NEW YORK, June 19.—William Buxton, alleged anarchist and bomb manufacturer, and who is believed to have planned injury to Baron Rosen, the Russian Ambassador, was arrested yesterday and held for trial at Bridgeport, Ct., charged with making the bomb that partly destroyed the home of William Kierney in that city last Thursday.

The bomb was arranged in a piece of stove wood, but did not injure anyone.

DARED TO WED, COUPLE MARRY

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 19.—"Dared" by their friends at a dinner last night to get married, Miss Elizabeth Marion Ross and Revilo E. Harrington, both of Waltham, drove to the city clerk's office, accompanied by their friends, secured a license, and within twenty minutes were man and wife. The couple had been engaged for some time, although the wedding had been set for Fall. Mr. Harrington is a well known druggist.

FRED MUTH, KIDNAPPED BOY, SAFE AT HOME

Demands for $1,000 were made upon the boy's father, a wealthy Philadelphia jeweler, with threats that harm would come to the boy if the money was not given. The father, after a few days, allowed the newspapers to take the case. Muth was quoted as saying that the child was all right and that the police had given up searching. Kidnapper Kean fell into the trap and his arrest followed.

BREWERS FACE CHARGE UNDER ANTI-TRUST LAW

Harvard Company Accused in Four Counts by Middlesex Grand Jury.

Indicted on four counts for violating the anti-trust law, the Middlesex Grand Jury has declared the Harvard Brewing Co. made agreements in restraint of trade. This became known when Patrick J. Enright and Ward B. Holloway, two officers of the Harvard Brewing Co., who with John Joyce and Richard C. Hemman, president and cashier, respectively, of the same company, and LaForest H. Beals and Frank B. Dow, ex-Police Commissioners of Lowell, were indicted a week ago by the Middlesex Grand Jury for conspiracy, appeared before Judge Sherman in the Middlesex Superior Criminal Court at East Cambridge yesterday to be placed under bonds of $2,000 each for their appearance at the conspiracy trial.

There are four counts to the indictment against the company, each being based on the statute of the revised law prohibiting a corporation from making it a condition of the sale of goods, wares or merchandise that the purchaser shall not sell or deal in the goods, wares or merchandise of any other corporation. The indictment charges that the Harvard Brewing Company violated this statute on March 1, 1906, by imposing such a condition on James A. Cudworth and Thomas J. Kennedy, both Lowell liquor dealers, and on March 10, 1906, on Elias A. McQuade and Patrick Kelly, two other liquor dealers of Lowell. All four counts make the same allegations and are the same in verbiage, with the exception of the dealers' and purchasers' names.

THIRD RAIL DIDN'T HARM HIM; FALL DID

Jostled from the platform of the City Square station yesterday by the crowd endeavoring to get a look at the parade, John Meather of 42 Vernon street, Roxbury, fell beside the third rail, the five-foot fall rendering him unconscious. He sustained only a contusion of the head, face and right leg.

FOUR MEN HURT IN AUTO WRECK AT HIGH SPEED

Car Skids and They Are Hurled to Ground While Going Fifty Miles an Hour.

Four men were hurt, one dangerously, and a big sixty horsepower car wrecked on Commonwealth avenue last evening at the corner of Granby street, because the operator lost control of the machine when it "skidded" while going at a racing speed, struck the curbing and was overturned. The occupants were James Fortescue, aged sixty-one years, of 403 Newbury street, Frank D. Costello, aged seventeen, of 1,343 Beacon street, Lantie V. Blum, aged twenty-five, of 1,481 Beacon street and J. C. O'Brien of 309 Dartmouth street.

Mr. Fortesque had his left arm broken, contusions about the head and face, right thumb fractured and received possible internal injuries. He is on the dangerous list at the City Hospital. Mr. Costello's collar bone was fractured and he and the other two men were badly bruised. Mr. O'Brien was operating the machine and he was not thrown out but was pinned in his seat by the steering wheel.

The car was valued at $6,000 and had been rented from the Reed-Underhill Company on Stanhope street only fifteen minutes previously. It is almost a total wreck. According to those in the car, the accident was primarily caused by the breaking of a rear chain which caused the car to "skid." Henry C. Turner, a witness of the accident, says, however, that the car was going at a frightful speed and could not be controlled on the slippery road bed. Mr. Turner declares that the car must have been going at the rate of nearly fifty miles an hour.

SWEAR M'DONNELL'S SLAYER IS INSANE

UTICA, N. Y., June 19.—Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald, expert on mental diseases, swore yesterday at the Preusser murder trial that the slayer of Myles McDonnell is insane and was in this condition at the time of the crime. Preusser told the physician that nothing had occurred that justified him in killing McDonnell. Preusser also admitted that he must have been out of his head when he did the shootin-

Kidnapper's Statement to the American

"I did not intend to kill the boy. I needed the money, and I must have been crazy when I got him. There were times when the feeling was strong on me to send him back to his home. Then sometimes I thought I'd kill myself and let them find the boy. They say it's life imprisonment. Well, my life's a wreck. But they can't keep me in prison. There's more than one way of killing one's self.

"I would never have been caught if it had not been for that lie in the papers this morning. I thought the Muths had 'conned' the police. They would not have got me if the papers hadn't lied."

SHOE LABEL MAY IDENTIFY 'MYSTERY GIRL'

Search for Name Young Mother Guarded in Death Pushed by Police.

WORCESTER, June 19.—In a half obliterated shoe label and a partially erased memorandum on a visiting card, the Worcester police believe to-day that they have exhausted the only existing clues in the case of the "young woman of mystery" who died in the city hospital here Sunday under the name of Mrs. Gertrude Atwood after giving birth to a baby boy. It is thought that not only this name, but a name and address which she gave as those of her father, Edward Armstrong of Halifax, Nova Scotia, are fictitious and that she carried her real name a secret to the grave.

No word has been received from Halifax, and it is not believed that there is anyone in that city of the name given by the dying mother.

The shoe label is that of a Temple place dealer in Boston, whose name had been carefully obliterated. Search of the young woman's effects showed that she had erased every possible mark of identification on her clothes. In her room was found a visiting card with the original name smudged out and on which was written the address of a Worcester woman physician. When interviewed, the doctor said she had received a letter a short time ago from a woman physician in Boston connected with a home for unfortunate girls, saying that a girl whom she would send, might call on her in the near future. This letter has been turned over to the local police. Whether the dead woman was the girl referred to is not yet known.

It has developed that Mrs. Atwood, as she styled herself, came to Worcester about seven weeks ago. She has been rooming at a private boarding house kept by Mrs. Hatch at No. 136 Main street, who says that she was very well supplied with money and always paid her bills promptly. Mrs. Atwood, however, kept aloof from the other boarders, and her landlady says did not exchange half a dozen words with anyone in the place. She did not receive any mail during the seven weeks in which she was in the house, although she sent a number of letters at various times.

The baby which she has left it is believed will live.

WOMAN DEFIES POLICE, GUARDS FARM WAGON

Defying the order of the Dorchester police that she could not collect garbage without a permit from the Board of Health, Martha Degnan, the woman overseer of the Symonds Stock Farm, drove down Dorchester avenue early to-day in a large farm wagon and collected a barrel of refuse for her stock. With her was Sam Nicholson, the farmhand who was arrested last week and fined $20 for gathering garbage in a similar manner under Mrs. Degnan's orders.

The defiant woman stopped her horse at all of the places where her men had been in the habit of collecting garbage, and, mounting guard over the wagon, sent Nichols to load the refuse.

"The police have arrested two men I have sent on this errand," Mrs. Degnan said indignantly to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, "as a result of an attempt to persecute me. I said when Nicholson was fined that I would drive the wagon myself on the next trip and I am making good my words. I defy the police to arrest me."

Mrs. Degnan has filed charges against Captain Charles Hunt and Patrolman James Halligan of the Dorchester Police Station, accusing them of unjust measures toward her.

REPORT TWO WARSAW REGIMENTS IN MUTINY

BAND OF TERRORISTS RAIDS ESTATE AND CARRIES OFF VALUABLE PLUNDER.

WARSAW, Poland, June 19.—It is reported that a regiment of infantry and a regiment of military stationed at the strong Nvogergievsk fortress, ten miles northwest of this city, have mutinied and refused to obey their officers. No details of the reported mutiny have become known yet.

The Laswandit estate in the government of Siedlce has been attacked by a band of terrorists. The manor house was entered, and the landlord M. Lobacheff, wounded. The place was looted, and the terrorists carried off 75,000 roubles. They made their escape.

USE NAME OF CZAR IN JEW SLAUGHTER

BERLIN, June 19.—The massacre and torture of Jews continues unabated in various parts of Russia.

At Saroki, in Bessarabia, the authorities placarded a telegram from St. Petersburg which read: "Death to the Jews. Kill them all," and signed "Nicholas."

The peasants, believing that the command really came from the Emperor, made violent attacks upon the Jews, killing many. At Jitomir five Jew baiting agitators from St. Petersburg organized formidable riots in which Jews were the victims.

At Moshau wealthy Gentiles of the place who hate the Jews publicly offered monetary rewards for effective Jew baiting. The scale of remuneration for outrages against the Jews was $5 to everyone who killed a Jew; $2 to everyone wounding a Jew; $1 for every male Jewish babe killed. As the result of the posting of this offer peasants of the district are gathering and arming themselves for the purpose of earning rich rewards by the murder of Jews.

Anti-semitic riots have also been organized at Plock, Kutno, Lowicz, Kielce, Chelm, Lomzha, Pinczow, Kremenetz. No details of the casualties have yet been received.

At Kostroma, capital of the district of the same name, 200 miles northeast of Moscow, a mob invaded the Ghetto and plundered and demolished the homes and shops of Jews unhindered. The buildings were finally given over to the torch.

At Elizabethgrad Orthodox Greek Church priests incited the populace to attack the Jews, and bloody riots resulted. At Bogatopole, in the province of Volhynia, the local authorities posted placards containing a proclamation summoning the loyal populace of the town to exterminate the Jews, who are revolutionists and enemies of the fatherland.

The total figures of the casualties at Bialystok are not known, but seventy bodies have already been buried, probably less than half the total of the killed.

The number of wounded is enormous. Surgeons have arrived from Warsaw to assist the overworked staffs of the hospitals in caring for the injured.

A feature of the excesses was the bestiality and brutality with which the victims of the massacre were treated. Some of the wounded have scarcely a whole bone in their bodies.

Everywhere could be seen weeping women hunting for traces of killed or wounded relatives. Before practically every house left intact hung an ikon with a burning lamp and the street doors were marked with great crosses, made with chalk or of cloth, to show that the inmates were Christians.

Millionaire's Son, Fighting Poverty, Marries a Nurse

Became Sweethearts at Danvers Asylum and Rufus Hatch Waits for First Wife to Get Divorce.

Rufus Hatch, son of a millionaire now dead, has again jumped into the limelight, after an obscurity of four years, during which he has worked hard for a footing in the battle of life. On Thursday he was married to Miss Kathryn Killilea, a nurse at the Danvers Insane Asylum. Hatch has been working there as an attendant.

Young Hatch is the son of the late Rufus Hatch of New York, once managing director of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and for twenty years one of the best known financiers on Wall Street.

The marriage to Miss Killilea took place within a month after he learned that his former wife, who was Miss A. M. Loud, daughter of a millionaire lumberman, had secured a divorce in Ohio. The couple are living near Boston, and Mr. Hatch contemplates a new attack upon fortune by engaging in the fruit commission business.

The career of young Hatch has been eventful. He has known the extremes of great affluence and biting poverty. In 1895, two years after his father's death, he married Miss A. M. Loud, and the couple went to Montreal, where young Hatch started in business with the Fruit Dispatch Company. After a year's work he suffered a physical breakdown and returned to New York. While in this condition he became involved, in 1902, in a sensational incident in New Jersey, his sanity was challenged, and he was sent to White Plains, N. J., to a sanatorium.

Later he was given a trial for the purpose of proving his sanity, and was successful. He then came to New England and started out to earn his own living. He worked for a time on a farm, and again as a shoemaker, and about three years ago took a place as an attendant at the Danvers Hospital.

It was here that he first met Miss Killilea, a nurse. Hatch was not free to marry, however, as the wife whom he had left behind when he left New York had never attempted to secure a divorce, as he supposed. A month ago, however, he received information that, as a matter of fact, she had been legally divorced from him for six months.

IN BIG BALLOON ENTIRE NIGHT DURING STORM

NEW YORK, June 19.—All night in a balloon, during a terrific electric storm lasting eight hours, their clothes frozen stiff, and so high up that they could not see the earth, is the record of the remarkable experience of Dr. Julian P. Thomas of this city and Charles Levee, a French aeronaut, who returned safely last night confident that in several ways they have broken all aeronautic records in America.

They left here in Dr. Thomas's big balloon, the Nirvana, at 6 p. m. Sunday, and for 14½ hours were buffeted about over New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, landing on the farm of C. T. Miller, in the town of Butternuts, Otsego County, N. Y., at 8:30 a. m.

While suffering considerably from the cold and almost continuous drenching, both were in good spirits when they arrived here to-night. Their balloon is unharmed. Dr. Thomas said:

"We entered the most terrific electric storm imaginable. It is useless to attempt to find words to give even an impression of what it was like. This storm lasted from 9 o'clock until 5 in the morning. Meanwhile we were from 2,000 to 5,000 feet above the earth, and going through space twenty or thirty miles an hour."

Dr. Thomas says they went higher than any other American balloonist, went farther West and were longer in the air than any other American.

A LETTER TO OUR READERS

53 Cottage St., Melrose, Mass

Dear Sir:

"Ever since I was in the Army, I had more or less kidney trouble, and within the past year it become so severe and complicated that I suffered everything and was much alarmed—my strength and power was fast leaving me. I saw an advertisement of Swamp-Root and wrote asking for advice. I began the use of the medicine and noted a decided improvement after taking Swamp-Root only a short time.

I continued its use and am thankful to say that I am entirely cured and strong. In order to be very sure about this, I had a doctor examine some of my water to-day and he pronounced it all right and in splendid condition.

I know that your Swamp-Root is purely vegetable and does not contain any harmful drugs. Thanking you for my complete recovery and recommending Swamp-Root to all sufferers I am." Very truly yours,

I. C. RICHARDSON.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, sent absolutely free by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root. If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

The motorman's monitor, "LITHOLIN" Waterproofed Linen Collar.

Laughs at laundries and sneers at the storm.

But because it's waterproof, don't think it isn't a linen collar. That's the beauty of it—it is!

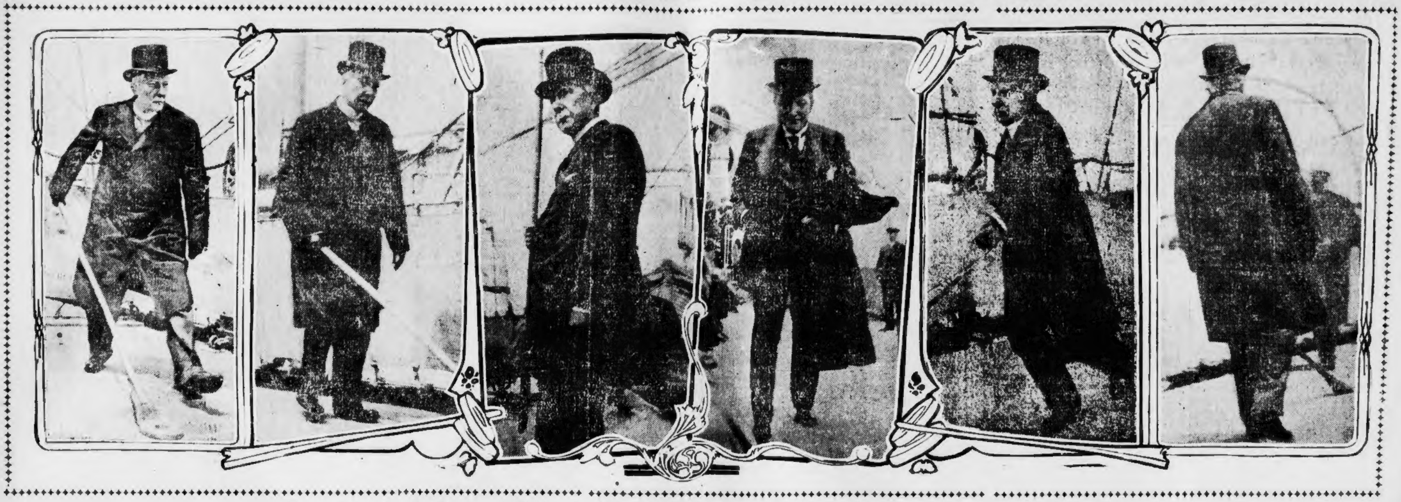
JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER CAUGHT (BY THE CAMERA) IN THE ACT OF PLAYING SHUFFLEBOARD

Remarkable Series of Snapshots Taken on the Deutschland by William Hoster, The American's Correspondent.



Copyright, 1906, by William Randolph Hearst, American-Journal-Examiner.

FROM START TO FINISH!—THE STORY OF THE GAME TOLD IN PICTURES AND THE PROSE OF THE CORRESPONDENT'S CABLED DESCRIPTION

"Shuffleboard was his favorite amusement on board ship (the liner Deutschland) and he was constantly on the watch for some one with whom to play.

"He played (shuffleboard) with any one near who was willing to be his partner and—

"Even in the middle of a stroke would engage in good natured chaff with those about him.

"One day Mr. Rockefeller was whitewashed, and he felt in his overcoat pockets, as if he had lost all his money. 'Can I lend you some change, Mr. Rockefeller?' asked his partner.

"At first he (Mr. Rockefeller) burst out laughing, then turning his back he said very seriously, 'No, I thank you; I think I'll be able to get along.'

"The next game he won by a clever shot and got a round of applause. He was so pleased that he smiled broadly and danced a jig step on the deck."

BULLET FROM CARNIVAL CROWD HITS CHELSEA GIRL

Police Investigating Mysterious Shooting, from Which Victim Narrowly Escaped Death.

Chelsea police are investigating to-day the mysterious shooting of Miss Nathalie Shepard of that city, who was wounded by some unknown person while watching the carnival crowd on Bunker Hill night.

Miss Shepard is only sixteen years old, but she displayed remarkable nerve after she was hit, walking home without screaming or fainting. She was standing on Broadway, not far from her home at No. 51 Webster street, with a party of friends. Suddenly, from out of the unknown, came a thirty-eight-calibre revolver bullet, striking Miss Shepard in the upper part of her right arm.

Miss Shepard gave a little cry of pain, then hurried home. Some of her friends went with her. Others notified the police. Thorough search of the neighborhood was made by the officers, but no trace of the person firing the shot could be found.

As most revolver shots, either blank or ball, in such a celebration as that of Bunker Hill Day, are fired into the air, it looks as though this person might have fired deliberately at Miss Shepard, singling her hair out from her companions.

Neither shot nor report was heard at the time on account of the racket being made by the carnival crowd. Whoever fired the shot must have escaped hurriedly. But the police are pursuing their inquiries to-day, and the offender will be vigorously prosecuted if caught.

The bullet has been extracted from Miss Shepard's arm, and she is fairly comfortable to-day.

PATTISON DIES AS COURT RULES HIM GOVERNOR

Republicans Now Have Opportunity to Run Ohio Politics Which Court Denied.

CINCINNATI, June 19.—Governor John M. Pattison, who was swept into office in the last reform wave by 40,000 plurality, as the only Democrat elected in the State, and whose tenure in office the Republicans have insistently tried to sever on the ground of physical and mental incompetency, died this afternoon—the same day that Justice Swing, in the Superior Court, had decided that he was qualified in every way for his position.

Death has given his political foes the advantages they were unable to get in the courts, for now the entire patronage of the State that was held at the Governor's command will be dispensed by his Republican successor. It gives the State over again to the Republicans, whose regular plurality of 255,500 was melted to place Pattison in the gubernatorial chair.

The Governor passed away at his country home in Milford, a suburban village, a few miles East of Cincinnati.

Although the Governor has been ill since before the November election, and was so weak on the day of his inaugural that the reviewing stand was covered with glass to protect him from the weather, his death to-day was unexpected.

He had been taken in a closed carriage to the various festivities attending his inaugural and then to his home. It was his last public appearance.

General Andrew L. Harris took the oath of Governor of Ohio, at his home in Eaton last evening.

MORAN TO SIFT CHARGE IN 'L' DAMAGE CASE

Woman Witness Declares She Was Detained Against Her Will.

District Attorney John B. Moran will conduct a thorough investigation into the charges made by Miss Bertha Sturgeon that she was detained against her will in the office of M. F. Dickinson, attorney for the Boston Elevated, after she had repudiated a statement read to her which she was told she had made in the suit brought by George Merrow against the Elevated.

Miss Sturgeon's startling testimony was given in the beginning of the second trial of Merrow's suit before Judge Bell in the Superior Civil Court yesterday. After hearing her statement, Judge Bell ordered the case taken from the jury.

The justice characterizes the charges as very grave and said that they should be thoroughly investigated by the proper authorities.

Courts Investigation.

Lawyer Dickinson told Judge Bell that in all his experience as an attorney it was the first time that his honor had been impeached. He said that he was anxious to have the fullest investigation that the charges were false in every particular.

Attorney William Sullivan, counsel for Merrow, will have an interview with Judge Bell to-day to see what action he will take in the matter.

Miss Sturgeon is a dressmaker and lives in Roxbury. During the first trial of the case she was a witness for the Elevated. Yesterday she was called as a witness for the plaintiff. Then she told her story.

Says She Was Detained.

She said that she had gone to the office of Mr. Dickinson and while there someone commenced to read a statement which they said she had made. The statement was not true in some particulars, Miss Sturgeon testified, and she repudiated it.

When she started to leave the office she said that she was told that she could not go, that if she tried to leave there was an officer waiting to arrest her.

NEWCOMERS IN OPERA ARE A BIG SUCCESS

Claudia Albright made her initial appearance in the Castle Square opera company yesterday, singing the role of Serpolette in "Chimes of Normandy." This fine old opera of the Corneville fair was given with fine spirit before an audience filling the theatre to overflowing. Miss Albright sang and acted with charming grace and intelligence, and in the singing of the sprightly, "Just Look at That, Just Look at This," she neatly fitted the curtain gift of roses to the whimsical words in a way that greatly enhanced her undeniable success in this part. The other newcomer, Harry Luckstone, made an instant success with his "I Love the Sea," and its sequel music. His bearing and action in the character of the returned though disguised marquis was masterly and most enjoyable.

The old miser, played by Mr. Thayer, was a real work of art; sweet and Marguerite-ish was the Germaine song by Miss Gardner, and the fisherman of Mr. Tallman was tuneful and true. The chorus was well imbued with its responsibility, and the entire company, especially in ensemble, sang and acted with a crispness that was delightful from any viewpoint. Mr. Lyman Wheeler will alternate with Mr. Tallman this week in the part of the fisherman, Grenicheux.

Colonial Theatre

Richard Carle's third week in Boston opened most auspiciously at the Colonial Theatre last evening. The piece broke records for a fortnight, and now it has started out upon a new career of prosperity, with audiences just as large as they were when the Summer season first opened three weeks ago. It is a capital show for all seasons of the year. Mr. Carle is funnier than ever as the impecunious American manager with his troupe of giddy chorus girls stranded in Japan. He has an efficient associate comedian in Fred Frear, who plays the Japanese official who is sentenced to be tickled to death by ostrich feathers. Harry B. Williams appeared in the cast for the first time last evening as the song book boy.

Tremont Theatre

At the Tremont Theatre last night was inaugurated the regular Summer season, with Summer prices prevailing, and Harry Bulger and his associates entering the fourth week of their stay here in Henry W. Savage's latest musical funfest, "The Man From Now," were greeted by an audience which completely filled the theatre. It was one of the largest and at the same time one of the most enthusiastic audiences of the year. Harry Bulger, Helen Hale, Frances Demerest, Walter Lawrence and Hattie Arnold each won new honors by their clever work. To-night the members of the Chicago baseball club will be the guests of the management, and to-morrow afternoon will be signalized as the last "professional" matinee of the season.

Norumbega Park

Fourth week of the season at Norumbega Park, that beautiful resort on the banks of the Charles, has opened with no indication of a decrease of poularity. The vaudeville programme yesterday in the open-air theatre was of high class. The bill comprised Carleton and Terrie, singing comedians; Golden Gate Quartette in the latest songs; Francis Wood, the hoopologist; the De Fays, in musical selections; Mullen and Corelli, in a comedy acrobatic act, and the Komograph.

STANDING ROOM ONLY AT KEITH'S

"Standing Room Only" was the cry of the special officers at Keith's Theatre all the time after noon yesterday. It was the largest holiday attendance the house has ever known. One reason for this was, evidently, the wonderful array of attractions, such as the Fadettes, Horace Goldin, R. F. Outcault and Grace Cameron. The principal newcomer was R. F. Outcault, whom everybody knows as the creator of "Buster Brown." He was given an enthusiastic reception and began a series of sketches, interspersed with a short description of the growth of "Buster." His sketches of both "Tige" and "Buster" pleased the audience greatly.

Horace Goldin came with the reputation of being one of the greatest illusionists who has visited Boston, and he has fully lived up to that reputation. He does so much in the fifteen minutes or more that he occupies the stage that one wishes to see him several times before one appreciates all that he does. The Fadettes had a new programme, and Grace Cameron appears as a child in "You Can't Pick Plums from My Plum Tree," but the audience best liked her when she returned to her "Dolly Dimples" song. Hugh Stanton presented his sketch, "For Reform," and others on the bill are Will Carleton, the World Comedy Four, Wills and Hassan, Alpha Trio, hoop rollers and jugglers; Corbley and Burke, Irish comedians and dancers; Rado and Bertram in a comedy sketch, and Leonard Kane, clever dancer. "The Terrible Kids" scored a big laughing hit.

Majestic Theatre

This is the last week of the Boston engagement of "The Tourists" at the Majestic Theatre, and every theatre-goer will regret it. Not in many a long day has such a worthy light opera struck Boston. Not in many a day has a musical show made such an instantaneous hit. In the first place the music is of such a high order that it lifts the show out of the average class. It is not only light and catchy, but new and musicianly. The comedy has a story that holds the interest from start to finish, and as the scenes are laid in Hindustan the costumes are of rare and wonderful beauty.

An all-star cast is presenting the show. Richard Golden, Julia Sanderson, George Schiller, William Pruette, Alfred Hickman, Pall H. Ryley, Vera Michelena, Della Niven, Mabel Wilbur, Anna C. Wilson, Edna McClure and Edna Chase are only a few, and the chorus has fairly set the town in a whirl. The "Little Red Devils" have a song which is so novel that it gets many encores at every performance.

JOHN CRAIG PLANS FOR FINE COMPANY

John Craig, who begins a season at the Globe Theatre next Monday with his own stock company, is negotiating with Miss Lillian Lawrence for his leading lady. She is now in the West. His supporting company includes such favorites as J. L. Seeley, Mary Young, William Humphrey, Mary Sanders, William Evarts, Kate Ryan, Frederic Sullivan, Mabelle Estelle, Kendrick Hall, Cordelia MacDonald, Ethel Daggett and others. During his season at the Globe Mr. Craig will make a change of bill weekly. Two performances will be given daily.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

"Ten Nights in a Barroom," that famous old play, with its strong plot and a moral, proved to be a wonderful holiday attraction at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday. It is modernized and up to the minute in action, dressing and other respects, and it wins as much favor in its new form as it did in the days of the past. Charles Miller as Joe Morgan gives an intelligent modernized portrayal of that character. Wilmer Walter, Charles Wheeler, Butler Haviland, Henry Alexander, Edwin Denison, Florence Hale, Annette Marshall, Alice Thornton and Little Ella are all very faithful and satisfying. The offering is for a single week only. Next week "East Lynne" will be the offering.

Lyceum Theatre

"The Lyceum Theatre stock company gave an excellent performance yesterday. Two new skits, "Uncle Daniel" and "Count of Monte Carlo," furnish good vehicles for the comedians, Joe Kelley, Harry Koler, Harry La Marr, Lou Powers and Frank Cohan. The musical numbers are led by Marion Blake, Virginia Kelsey, Pearl Reid, Marshall and King, Meta Pelnze, Annett Wilsie and Beatrice Lane. New vaudeville acts are presented by Bohannon and Corey, in illustrated songs; Madison brothers, the boxing newsboys; Harper, Desmond and Hilliard, colored performers; Jeanre and Ellsworth, refined musical act, and comedy motion pictures by Bert Bohannon. Matinees are given every day at popular prices.

Picnics at Provincetown

There is a delightful place for a picnic on the top of Town Hill, Provincetown, where the great Pilgrim monument is soon to be built. The steamer Cape Cod leaves the wharf at Boston, No. 400 Atlantic avenue, at 9 o'clock and reaches Provincetown at 1 o'clock. From the wharf to the top of the hill is not more than five minutes' walk, and there is grass and shade, delightful, pure salt air, and a view that stretches away toward the coast of Spain. The boat makes a stop of an hour and a half and reaches the wharf at Boston in time to connect with the early evening outgoing trains. The expense is merely nominal, and the trip makes a delightful summer's day outing.

Palace Theatre

The Palace Theatre got its share of patronage yesterday, and two large audiences enjoyed the programme presented by the stock company. The burlesques staged by John Black are full of good comedy and entertaining specialties. The chorus work is exceptionally good, and the dancing numbers splendidly executed. In the straight vaudeville Leo Stevens and Lillian Keeley made a big hit with their bright skit; the Alvalto trio gave a wonderful acrobatic performance, while the Wilsons were entertaining in a merry comedy sketch. West and Williams's jokes and witticisms caught the house, and the ne wmaving pictures in the Palacescope were enthusiastically received.

Austin & Stone's Museum

It was a day of monster audiences yesterday at Austin & Stone's Museum. Psycho, the electric marvel, was one of the headline features and the Barbeau Band and Orchestra was in full swing. "The Passion Play in Miniature"; Trixy and her den of pythons, including the monster Ben Hur, the longest snake in the world, Punch and Judy and the lectures of Professor Hutchings were among other attractions in the curio hall. In the theatre the "Minstrel Maids" gave a splendid entertainment. The olio included Madge Daytelle, Jack Davis, Thibault Brothers, James and Richard, and the Pa-Ma-La trio.

TRUST GRABS MUTUAL LIFE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Despite the efforts of President Peabody to keep the fact secret, it became known through a trustee of the Mutual Life yesterday that the big insurance corporation, with almost half a billion of assets, had passed into the hands of a general committee, which clinched the hold of the Standard Oil Company and its allied corporations upon the property of the policy holders.

RIOT CALL TO SAVE OFFICERS FROM MOB

A riot call turned in by Patrolmen McLean and Gilman of station 4 at the corner of Shawmut avenue and Hingham street last evening saved them from being treated harshly by a crowd of toughs who assaulted them when they attempted to arrest a young man who had insulted passers-by. A squad of policemen from the East Dedham street station responded as the officers were desperately holding the young man, while blows were being rained upon them. The prisoner gave his name as Murray Wedall, twenty-four years of age, of No. 416 Newbury street.

FIANCEE MEETS CRANE FAMILY

PITTSFIELD, June 19.—Miss Josephine Boardman of Washington is the guest of Mrs. Zenas Marshall Crane, mother of Senator W. Murray Crane, her fiance, yesterday, for the first time meeting the members of the Crane family. Senator Crane escorted her to his mother's home, where a family dinner followed. During the day the Senator, Miss Boardman, Mrs. Zenas M. Crane, Miss Crane and other members of the Crane family made a run in automobiles to Pleasant View Farm, in Windsor, Senator Crane's country place, where a part of the honeymoon will be spent.

TRIED TO MOB BAND PRAYING IN STREET

PROVIDENCE, June 19.—One thousand Jews, angered by the exhortations of a street praying band within sight of three synagogues, threatened to mob them, but were dispersed by the police reserves before harm resulted. The missionaries had attempted to expound Christian doctrine and discuss conditions in Russia.

Coupons from Sunday Issue Available To-day, To-morrow and Thursday.

Free Open-Air Entertainment and Parades Amply Repay Trip to New Pleasure Ground.

BOSTON AMERICAN guests are in the majority at Wonderland again to-day.

The coupons which were printed in the last BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, giving free admission to Wonderland, are available to-day, to-morrow or Thursday. The ticket-takers at Revere's new pleasure resort are once more prepared for the advance guard of BOSTON AMERICAN visitors.

With favorable weather, one of the biggest crowds of these coupon patrons is expected. The first two weeks of these coupon offers brought large numbers of BOSTON AMERICAN guests to Wonderland. Those who went the first week took care to cut out the coupon from the paper on the following Sunday and go the second week, and the presumption is that they are preparing to do the same this week.

The free open-air circus, which is one of the best features of Wonderland, has a new bill for this week. This free show, the concerts by the Salem Cadet Band, the various parades, the free Japanese village, the electric illumination at night, all combine to form additional entertainment for the coupon guests, wholly without cost. The numerous concession enterprises, at moderate admission prices, supplement the day's enjoyment at Wonderland, making it one of the most delightful places in Bos-

poverty in the New York Ghetto

"Diseased and Decayed Meat"

President Roosevelt has made public the official report of Messrs. Neill-Reynolds, who have inspected the Chicago slaughter and meat packing industries.

The revelations of this report are extremely revolting, but we are told tha the worst half of the report has not been published.

Most all of us have eaten meat perhaps two or three times a day, and have reasons to believe that the nourishment meat contains is needed. But are we willing to continue the use of the decayed and diseased products that the money-mad meat packers have been supplying to our nation?

Now the question is what can we do? What are we GOING to do about this matter?

The fact is not widely known that there are foods made without animal meats, which are so close to meat in appearance and flavor that many people cannot be convinced that there is absolutely no animal meat contained in the foods, and as compared with animal meat the nourishing qualities of the food are superior.

There will be some delicious roasts, steaks and stews prepared for the exhibit which is to commence Tuesday, June 19th. You are cordially invited to sample these foods at the exhibition rooms, Colonial building, 100 Boylston street. If you cannot attend the exhibit, kindly write for detailed information and free samples. Battle Creek Sanitarium Co., Ltd., 100 Boylston street, Boston; W. F. Childs, N. E. Agent.

MAY TURN DOWN WAGE DIVIDEND

FALL RIVER, June 19.—Officers of the local Textile Union to-day would not discuss the offer of a five per cent. wage dividend, made yesterday, to last until October 1, by the Manufacturers' Association. A special meeting has been called for to-morrow to vote on the proposition and to frame a reply.

Among the operatives there seems to be a general opinion that the offer will be refused because the request for a restoration of wages was made chiefly on account of dissatisfaction with the sliding scale on account of its being open to influence by the speculative market. This objection, it is held, is not removed by the manufacturers' proposition.

NEW HEARST LEAGUE FORMED

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., June 19.—Despite a heavy rain, a large and enthusiastic organization meeting of the Broome County Independence (Hearst) League was held in the City Hall last evening.

The meeting was addressed by ex-Senator William F. Mackey of Buffalo and by Rev. Dr. Charles F. Hakes of this city. Both spoke enthusiastically of the outlook for the success of the League in Broome County, and their remarks were greeted with applause.

The membership roll of the league, circulated yesterday for the first time, has already been signed by 300 voters.

GRAND JURY SAYS SHOT WAS ACCIDENT

PROVIDENCE, June 19.—The Grand Jury of Washington County found "no bill" against Benjamin L. Jordan of Kenyon, who accidentally shot and killed William T. Lewis on May 3.

NO GAME WITH COLBY.

The baseball game scheduled yesterday between Harvard and Colby on Soldiers Field was cancelled on account of the condition of the diamond. Harvard's next game will be the first of the series with Yale in Cambridge on Thursday afternoon at 2.

BULLET BORES 16 HOLES IN BOY

LYNN, June 19.—While looking into the muzzle of his rifle yesterday True Worthy Fogg, Jr., the sixteen-year-old son of True Worthy Fogg of Mudge street, a shoe heel manufacturer, was shot in the stomach. To-day it is not expected he will live. The rifle had failed to work and he was examining it to see if he could fix it.

With Fogg at the time were two younger boys, Leslie Gebow and Henry Foote. They were some distance into the Kitson woods, being about twenty minutes' walk from the Fogg house. Fogg asked the boys to help him along, and walked thus nearly a quarter of a mile to the house. The police ambulance was sent for, and he was taken to the Union Hospital, where an operation was performed and sixteen holes in the intestines sewed up. It was impossible to find the bullet.

RESCUE CREW; NOW TRY TO SAVE SHIP

NEW YORK, June 19.—Tugs are at work to-day trying to pull the Italian steamer Vincenzo Bonanno, stranded three miles east of Fire Island Lighthouse, from the sand bar where she struck. The wind and heavy sea have rolled the vessel considerably and the captain of the steamer decided to leave the ship with his crew. Two men were brought safely ashore in the breeches buoy, and the remainder of the crew, thirty-one men, the captain and the one passenger, were brought ashore in a lifeboat.

Boston, Mass., June 16, 1906.

Hearst's Boston American,
Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen:-

Though skeptical at first as to the ability of the Boston American to bring results, we now, after having inserted a half dozen advertisements in it, are compelled to admit without stint, that your paper has indeed brought to our Firm immediate and most excellent returns.

The results of our five weeks trial of your Sunday edition have been so gratifying that you may expect our copy when we start our Fall campaign.

In conclusion, to be just and fair, you have surely demonstrated to our satisfaction, that the Boston American must possess the enormous circulation you claim for it, and were we not thoroughly convinced of its splendid power as a business getter we would not expend our money with you for advertising space.

Very truly yours,

115 BUNKER HILL VICTIMS 2 BAD WOUNDS

200,000 Brave Rain at Charlestown and Three Parades Are Given During Day.

NIGHT PROGRAMME BARRED

Of the 115 victims of the Bunker Hill celebration yesterday but two are to-day reported to be in a serious condition. These are James Patsoe, an Italian boy, of No. 430 Hanover street, shot in the abdomen, and Morris Kinyt, of No. 220 Fourth street, wounded in the leg.

At the Haymarket square relief station, 70 victims were treated, at the City Hospital 16, at the Massachusetts General Hospital 25, and at the Emergency Hospital 4. Nearly all of the list were suffering from powder burns.

The Carnival committee is to-day completing preparations for storing the electrical floats until Thursday, to which date the evening parade was postponed on account of the weather.

Crowd Braves Rain.

For hours yesterday the crowd braved the rain, splashing through the mud, and laughed at damp clothes. It was not until evening when it was reluctantly announced that because of the weather it would be necessary to postpone the crowning event of the day, the electrical parade, that the throngs deserted Charlestown.

One of the most elaborate programmes for years had been arranged yesterday, and while many features were eliminated on account of the rain, a brave effort was made to carry through the celebration with the usual vim and energy.

Civic Parade Is Split.

Owing to the decision of the Board of Aldermen that none but military organizations could participate in the civic parade, the fraternal organizations that were thus barred promptly organized a separate parade, which was equal to that of the soldiers and sailors. Four thousand members of various Irish fraternal organizations formed in line at 12:30, and, attired in the picturesque uniforms of their orders and accompanied by a number of bands, they won thousands of cheers from the crowds on the walks. The military parade in the afternoon was applauded as vigorously.

Charlestown was given three parades during the day, beginning with the triumphant march in the morning of King Carnival, accompanied by his retinue.

In the evening, following the military parade, the Ninth Regiment marched to the Common, where the guardsmen were cheered by a large crowd. This was the first time the twelve companies had been together on parade since the camp at Westfield.

The day was notable because of the few arrests in Charlestown, although over 100 persons were arrested in Boston during the day because of drunken or disorderly conduct.

'SPIRIT OF '76' TAKEN; COPIED

MARBLEHEAD, June 19.—The Selectmen of this town are searching for the parties who entered Abbot Hall, took the "Spirit of '76" from its frame and set it up on the lawn for the purpose of getting snapshots of it. The painting is the town's most prized possession and is valued at $20,000.

John N. Osborne, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, said last night:

"I characterize this piece of work as an outrage. We know who did it, and if we can reach him by any process of law we shall do so. On Thursday a smooth-tongued young man came to me to ask permission to take a photo of the painting. He represented himself as from Horace K. Turner & Co. of Boston. I told him that it was impossible."

PARAGON PARK A REAL WINNER

Greater Paragon Park is open again. They are calling it Greater Paragon Park now, and they do well to do so, for if ever a park was bigger and better Paragon Park is that one. The only fault that could be found with Paragon Park last year was that it lacked one big show. This year all criticism has been removed, and Paragon Park has not one, but two shows of more than ordinary greatness. The first of these is "Hades to Paradise by Air Ship," a spectacular production upon which $40,000 was expended. This show is without question the most elaborate undertaking made by any park in New England.

Another new show of special attractiveness is the Bostock Animal Arena, with its great variety of trained wild animals. Here may be seen specimens of every wild animal in captivity.

The children's circus, Lovers' Lane, Pike's Peak, Ethiopia, the Britt-Nelson fight pictures, these are the new shows; and of the old favorites there remain the circle swing, the foolish house, the Katzenjammer Castle, the Johnstown flood, the Frisco earthquake, the roller coaster and many other features.

LONGWORTHS AT ASCOT RACES

LONDON, June 19.—Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth attended the races at Ascot to-day, with Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, travelling by motor car. Yesterday they paid another visit to Parliament.

After lunching with Arthur Hamilton Lee, civil lord of the admiralty, and Mrs. Lee, formerly Miss Moore of New York, the party went to the House of Commons and the House of Lords. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Longworth dined at Dorchester House, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Reid, later visiting the opera in company with Mrs. Reid.

WEAVERS DEMAND AT LEAST LIVING WAGE

PAWTUCKET, R. I., June 19.—Weavers in the Lonsdale Company's F Mill here demand an increase of four cents per cut of sixty yards. They claim they cannot make a living wage at present.

HELD ON BURGLARY CHARGE.

BURLINGTON, Vt., June 19.—Samuel A. Caldwell of Boston was arrested here yesterday, charged by the police with burglarizing the safe of the Montpelier & Barre Traction Company at Montpelier on June 9.

MILLIONAIRE SOON TO WED POOR RUSSIAN AUTHORESS

MISS ANNA STRUNSKY

RUSSIAN WRITER, FIANCEE OF MILLIONAIRE.

William Walling of Chicago and Anna Strunsky, Both Socialists and Mutual Friends of Jack London.

Anna Strunsky, the young Russian authoress, whose engagement to William English Walling of Chicago was recently announced, is to marry Mr. Walling next month.

Miss Strunsky is a poor girl, her only source of support being the slender income earned by her gifted pen. Mr. Walling is a millionaire.

Her parents lived in San Francisco when that city was visited by earthquake and fire. Since the disaster New York city has been their home.

Mr. Walling's father, Dr. Willoughby Walling of Chicago, was formerly United States Consul in Edinburgh. One of his grandfathers was William H. English, who was the Democratic candidate for Vice-President on the Hancock ticket in 1880.

Miss Strunsky and Mr. Walling first met in St. Petersburg, where the girl had gone on a journalistic errand connected with the revolutionary propaganda. She is an avowed Socialist. So is Mr. Walling. Among their mutual friends are Jack London, with whom Miss Strunsky has collaborated in literary work, and James Graham Phelps Stokes, who married Rose Harriet Pastor, a cigarmaker who lived in poverty in the New York Ghetto.

GIRL RUNS AWAY TO SEE THE WORLD

PROVIDENCE, June 19.—"I am going as far as my money will take me. I will then seek employment. Some time I may let you know where I am." So wrote Miss Lena E. Austin, aged eighteen, tall, dark and fair of face, in a note to her parents in Scituate last Friday night. Then she left her bedroom by means of the window. Townspeople have been searching for her three days without result.

THRILLING STORY OF PACKINGTOWN! NOVEL THAT HAS STARTLED NATION!

THE JUNGLE—BY UPTON SINCLAIR

SYNOPSIS.

THE story of "The Jungle," Upton Sinclair's novel, which has caused the Government investigation into the methods employed by the Beef Trust, has its origin in an actual Packingtown romance.

The first chapter shows a broad-shouldered butcher being wedded to a young girl who sees in him a hero. The wedding, in all its grotesqueness, is described.

Practically penniless, Jurgis tells his bride she shall not return to work in the packing house—he will work early and late.

On arriving in Chicago, J. Szedvilas, a Lithuanian, who ran a delicatessen store in Packingtown, guided Jurgis, Ona, Marija and the remainder of the party through the stock yards after he had given them lodging.

The little coterie decided to purchase a house. They were to pay $12 a month for it. They find they have been swindled—that the company charges such interest that they will be unable to pay.

Jurgis refused to join a labor union that would have promoted the interests of all. He did not understand that the life was being worked out of him.

The little family discover that the real estate agent of the Packingtown concern for which its mature members worked had taken advantage of their ignorance, and thrust into the lease of the house Jurgis, Ona, Marija and the rest had obtained a clause compelling them to pay exorbitant interest on the structure. Stanislovas, the youngest of the party, was then sent to work. The certificate of age held by him lied. It said he was sixteen. He was years younger. Ona, too, was forced to seek a job. She paid $10 as tribute to the forelady who engaged her. Jurgis's health is failing from the terrible grind, and Ona suffers for weeks with excruciating pains because of dampness and overwork.

Yesterday's instalment told how Marija lost her job, because the factory closed down; how Jurgis, working on "time" during the slack season, was in the packing house ten or twelve hours a day, and yet received pay only for the few hours he worked. Sometimes thirty-five cents represented his daily earnings. The working members of the family join a labor union and attend the meetings. The eyes of Jurgis are opened to the fact that men of wealth are oppressing those who labor for them in Packingtown, and, strange thing for him, he begins to think of deep problems and ways of rectifying conditions.

CHAPTER IX.

Copyright, 1906, by Doubleday, Page & Co. All rights reserved.

ONE of the first consequences of the discovery of the union was that Jurgis became desirous of learning English. He wanted to know what was going on at the meetings, and to be able to take part in them; and so he began to look about him, and to try to pick up words. The children, who were at school, and learning fast, would teach him a few; and a friend loaned him a little book that had some in it, and Ona would read them to him.

Then Jurgis became sorry that he could not read himself; and later on in the Winter, when some one told him that there was a night school that was free, he went and enrolled.

After that, every evening that he got home from the yards in time, he would go to the school; he would go even if he were in time for only half an hour. They were teaching him both to read and to speak English—and they would have taught him other things, if only he had a little time.

Also the union made another great difference with him—it made him begin to pay attention to the country. It was the beginning of democracy with him. It was a little State, the union, a miniature republic; its affairs were every man's affairs, and every man had a real say about them. In other words, in the union Jurgis learned to talk politics.

In the place where he had come from there had not been any politics—in Russia one thought of the government as an affliction like the lightning and the hail. "Duck, little brother, duck," the wise old peasants would whisper; "everything passes away."

And when Jurgis had first come to America he had supposed that it was the same. He had heard people say that it was a free country—but what did that mean? He found that here, precisely as in Russia, there were rich men who owned everything; and if one could not find any work, was not the hunger he began to feel the same sort of hunger?

BECOMES A CITIZEN.

When Jurgis had been working about three weeks at Brown's there had come to him one noontime a man who was employed as a night watchman, and who asked him if he would not like to take out naturalization papers and become a citizen.

Jurgis did not know what that meant, but the man explained the advantages. In the first place, it would not cost him anything, and it would get him half a day off, with his pay just the same; and then when election time came he would be able to vote—and there was something in that.

Jurgis was naturally glad to accept, and so the night watchman said a few words to the boss, and he was excused for the rest of the day.

When, later on, he wanted a holiday to get married he could not get it; and as for a holiday with pay just the same—what power had wrought that miracle heaven only knew!

However, he went with the man, who picked up several other newly landed immigrants, Poles, Lithuanians and Slovaks, and took them all outside, where stood a great four-horse tally-ho coach, with fifteen or twenty men already in it. It was a fine chance to see the sights of the city, and the party had a merry time, with plenty of beer handed up from inside.

So they drove down town and stopped before an imposing granite building, in which they interviewed an official, who had the papers all ready, with only the names to be filled in. So each man in turn took an oath, of which he did not understand a word, and then was presented with a handsome ornamented document with a big red seal and the shield of the United States upon it, and was told that he had become a citizen of the Republic and the equal of the President himself.

A month or two later Jurgis had another interview with this same man, who to'd him to go to "register." And then finally, when election day came, the packing houses posted a notice that men who desired to vote might remain away until nine that morning, and the same night-watchman took Jurgis and the rest of his flock into the back room of a saloon, and showed each of them where and how to mark a ballot, and then gave each two dollars, and took them to the polling places, where there was a policeman on duty especially to see that they got through all right.

Jurgis felt quite proud of this good luck till he got home and met Jonas, who had taken the leader aside and whispered to him, offering to vote three times for four dollars, which offer had been accepted.

SCULLY, "THE BOSS."

And now in the union Jurgis met men who explained all this mystery to him; and he learned that America differed from Russia in that its government existed under the form of a democracy. The officials who ruled it, and got all the graft, had to be elected first; and so there were two rival sets of grafters, known as political parties, and the one got the office which bought the most votes.

Now and then the election was very close, and that was the time the poor man came in. In the stockyards this was only in national and State elections, for in local elections the Democratic party always carried everything. The ruler of the district was therefore the Democratic boss, a little Irishman named Mike Scully.

Scully held an important party office in the State, and bossed even the Mayor of the city, it was said; it was his boast that he carried the stockyards in his pocket. He was an enormously rich man—he had a hand in all the big graft in the neighborhood.

FULL-BLOODED INDIAN WANTS FIGHT

JOE GREGG IN HUB LOOKING FOR SCALPS

Navajo Lightweight Has Lost Only One Bout Out of Eighty-three.

Heap big Injun is Joe Gregg, the Indian fighter, now in the Hub, ready to meet all comers. He weighs in trim 135 pounds, but will give any ringster several pounds. Joe says that he can tell by looking into the other fellow's eye whether he can lick him.

He comes from Spokane and is a full-blooded Navajo and one of the sturdiest lads ever raised on a reservation. Six years he has been in the fighting game in the West, and now owns a house got from the proceeds from his matches. From Los Angeles to Alaska Joe is known in the ring, and he holds the championship of Alaska which he won three years ago.

He has been in eighty-three fights and only lost one. Charley Sieger, the Hoboken Iron Man went to a draw in twenty rodnds, and then beat him in ten in another fight. His one defeat was with a middleweight. Before he began fighting he was lassoing cattle on the plains, and then worked in a boiler shop in Frisco, and when in condition is tough as nails.

He was bitten in the back by one of his opponents in the ring, and carries the scar with him. A fine specimen of a "tin" ear adorns his head. When asked how he got it he said, "Everybody," meaning every fighter had hammered on the appendage, so that now it is three times its original size.

"I fight anybody," said Joe, "big or little. I like fifteen rounds all right. Six is too short. I licked Honolulu Cyclone in two punches."

JOHNSON WON IN A MINUTE

GLOUCESTER, June 19.—It took Jack Johnson, the colored heavyweight champion, just a minute to dispose of Charley Haighey of Lowell at the Gloucester Athletic Club. A left hand punch to the stomach sent Haighey through the ropes and he failed to come up in time.

TO PLAY FOR MAINE TITLE.

BRUNSWICK, Me., June 19.—Bowdoin and Colby will play tie off for baseball championship of Maine in Portland Saturday. Arrangements for the game were completed last night.

BRITISH BOXER AFTER BOUTS

From present indications it appears as if Boston is to have an invasion of English fighters. The latest to come ashore is Kid Wilson of London. He arrived a few days ago, but he kept his entry into Uncle Sam's domains very quiet. Having shaken off the feeling that existed after the long sea voyage and got his land legs in working order again Wilson was around some of the leading resorts yesterday. He notified the sporting men he came in contact with that he came here looking for trouble with the best lightweights in the country and he did not care how soon he got it.

On the other side he is regarded as the best lightweight developed since the days of Stanton Abbott, and he is acclaimed as the lightweight champion of Old Albion.

While in this country Wilson will be handled by Steve Mahoney, the manager of Jimmy Briggs and Harry Edels.

CHICAGO, June 19.—Jones decided to give Boston some more Altrock sauce this afternoon when the two tems were schedafternoon when the tow teams were sched-Nicholas pitched only three innings yesterday and that was only work for him. He didn't mind it in the least.

Collins has the big ancient man of the stone age, Cy Young, scraped and hung out in the sun so that he might be able to oppose Altrock.

The Sox haven't any wounds in their collective conscience because of what they have done since they reached home. They have played fourteen games and won ten of them, and they vowed that they would make it eleven out of fifteen to-day. Boston is not playing together, and it has the men out of their places, so it is up to the South Side boys to take the fourth and make it a clean sweep.

Before the Bostons leave here to-night the chances are that they will have completed negotiations for the transfer of Catcher Eddie McFarland of the local team to the Hub. Collins wanted to buy this hard hitting catcher, who is wrong with the local club, but President Charley Comiskey said that he wouldn't stand for a cash deal, but that he would tolerate a trade. It is rumored that the Bostons have agreed to let the Chicagos have Catcher Charley Graham, when he comes back from the coast.

Outfielder John Hayden has proven somewhat of a frost on the Boston team. Whereas he is a fielder of average ability and a dandy thrower he can't bat enough to keep himself warm, and is a very poor successor to Buck Freeman.

SOMERVILLE LOST TO E. H. S.

BAY STATE A. A. TOUR IS OVER

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The last of the motorists who participated in the run of the Bay State Automobile Association to Rye on Saturday came back to this city this afternoon. The main body returned yesterday, they coming over the roads as they chose. The roads were, as a whole, in rather a miserable condition, and the fine rain and mist which continued at intervals during the day did not by any means improve the situation. The going was slippery and dangerous, so much so that all the cars were driven with caution, and not a single accident occurred until Boston was reached, and which is described in another column.

The American Motor League has decided to test the validity of the action of the selectmen of Middlebury, Vermont, in posting the roads prohibiting the running of automobiles and motor cycles. The league has notified the selectmen of the town that its representatives would make a trip over the posted roads, and is desirous that some action be taken to determine the right of the town to forbid the use of the same by motorists. The town having taken the action which it has must either defend its position or recede. The selectmen have notified the chief of police of the proposed action of the league, and this alone would indicate what they propose to do in the premises.

The run of the Moon car from Boston to Rye through the heavy downpour of Sunday earned for it a small army of friends. H. E. Whiting, accompanied by a party of four, left Boston about 9 o'clock Sunday morning, and although the rain came down in torrents the car was forced through mud over the rims of the wheels, and reached the hotel in season to permit the party getting an early lunch. Then yesterday the return trip was made in company with the others, the car acting to perfection at every stage of the game.

GRANDPA IS WINNER OF THE GRAND ANNUAL

There were two features at the final day of the Country Club meeting at Clyde Park yesterday. The first was the riding of Mr. William Hayes on his chestnut gelding Grandpa in the Country Club Grand Annual and Ike Weir's illustration of the proper way to corral runaway steeds.

In the former instance Mr. Hayes elected to ride his horse in one of the premier events of steeplechasing in the entire country, the Grand Annual, as not only is the victory worth $3,500 to the winner, but the glory is inestimable.

No more had the spectators settled themselves to see the sport in the initial event of the afternoon, and Starter Ware had gotten them away, when Blue Print made a misstep and Jockey Carpenter dropped to the muddy course. Away flew the brown mare, riderless, with the grand stand on their tiptoes in the excitement of the moment.

It having been a six-furlong race, Ike Weir, assistant to the starter, was on the backstretch, and when the flying steed came tearing down the course he rushed out and caught her by the bridle. For a few moments it looked disastrous for horse and man, but up came Ike, smiling, with the captured steed in hand.

In the final event, Nutelius, with Donohue up, fell in the final run on the track, and again did the gallant horse catcher, Ike, show his value as an accessory to the turf by catching the gelding before he had gone twenty yards.

Coming to a description of the events on the programme yesterday, Mr. McMurtie's bay gelding Tellfare had it all his own way in the opening event over his opponents, of which Cabalist was second and Captain Hanna third.

In the second race, for three-year-olds and upward, it was very pleasing to the society people present that J. Henry Higginson won with Annie Russell. Jockey Robbins was first by six open lengths with Gallant at the finish, but for some unaccountable reason he considered it wise to push T. Wilson, riding Annie Russell, into the fence on the upper turn of the track. For this reason he was disqualified by the judges. Had betting been allowed the circumstances would have called forth criticism from those financially interested. As it was, the sport-loving public are wondering what caused Robbins to lose the race in the way he did.

In the next event Robbins had the mount on another of T. E. Mannix's horses, Oriflamme. This he won very handily, but it was noticeable that on account of his misbehaviour in the previous race applause was lacking.

The most exciting feature of the afternoon was the great finish in the Country Club Grand Annual. Thomas Hitchcock came over from New York well satisfied that his bay gelding Hylas had the goods all in his pocket. William C. Hayes had been very careful in the preparation of Grandpa, and while he carried five pounds more impost than the sterling favorite, yet he took the opportunity of riding his own nomination in the stake.

When the horses entered the stretch the entire crowd in the grand stand, those in the centre field, and the "four hundred" surrounding the clubhouse, rushed to the rails and cheered uproariously for Grandpa to win. It was almost conceded that Hylas had the victory, but he tired in the final struggle, and The Lad was second, with Grandpa first by half a length, and Mr. Hayes doffing his hat as he weighed in.

DORNER OR LINDAMAN TO FACE CHICAGO CUBS TO-DAY

It's travelling pretty swift when the Tenneyites can take a fall out of the leaders and get the better of them in the first meeting of the home lot, but that is what they did to the Chicago Cubs yesterday, and there is likely to be another consultation at the old field when the teams meet again to-day.

The Cubs fancied that they were going to have something easy handed to them when they struck the Hub, dallying with tailenders, but after a good night's rest they are probably of a different mind, and will go into the second contest knowing that it's all up with them if any breaks come.

A sorer leader than Captain Chance never wended his way out of the grounds after a game. The thought that his discarded battery, Pfeffer and O'Neil, were the pair most instrumental in the tumble of his pets and that Shorty Bates, an ex-minor leaguer, put on the finishing touches to his team's downfall, made him anything but happy.

To-day there will be some hot hustling by the visitors to even up the score, and Tenney will send Dorner or Lindaman in to wind up. Bridwell, who has a strained leg, may be unable to get in the game, which will weaken the team, as he is a tower of strength in the makeup.

Captain Chance will get out the strongest force he has in camp and will spring Three-Fingered Brown or Ovle Overall.

The holiday game which the Hubites won, 2 to 1, was one of the finest contests seen at the South End this season, and was particularly pleasing because of the home victory coming after a gruelling mill.

Pfeffer and Reulbach had a terrific duel, in which the former triumphed, but the gem-piece was the home run by Bates in the ninth inning, which wound up hostilities. It was so close to the foul line that the Chicago players put in a strong kick, but Umpire Johnstone was upheld by those who were in line with the hit and followed its course.

Kling, in the eighth, had hit over the left fence close to the dividing line and the umpire had declared a foul, and there seemed to be no mistake in spite of the holler put up.

Pfeffer's gilt-edge work in the box was something to marvel at. He fanned eight batters, and every one of the Cubs was a victim, except Slagle. In two innings he got two men on strikes and only once could his opponents get two hits running, and that is how they scored their only tally.

Three times during the game the Tenneyites had good chances to score outside the second inning, when the one run came in, but could not advance.

It looked like a long-drawn-out fray when the Cubs got even in the eighth, but Bates cut it short in the ninth with his homer with one down. Not a misplay was made by either team and the race was of the keenest from the bell.

HARVARD CREW IS TROUBLED WITH BOILS

Special to the Boston American.

GALES FERRY, Ct., June 19.—Yale and Harvard oarsmen brought out hickory logs and piled them on the fireplaces yesterday to drive away the chill that penetrated the Thames. The water was too rough for time rowing and the crew squads at both camps hugged the open grate. Boils have made their appearance amid the oarsmen at Harvard. Swaim, Kemp and Cutler are out of the boat because of the affliction. Although Swaim has practically recovered, Cutler is likely to lose his seat as stroke of the freshman crew because of his painful trouble. Captain Morse of the Yale crew is bothered in a similar way, but keeps on rowing.

At both Yale and Harvard examinations in studies were closed yesterday, and the oarsmen held a jubilee at finishing their school year. Nothing is left now to interfere with their rowing.

BIG RACE AT READVILLE MAY BE 4-CORNERED

Will the backers of the noted trio of trotters, Sweet Marie, Tiverton and Wentworth, permit of Snyder McGregor, 2:05¼, becoming one of the number in the big match at Readville on July 4?

It is certainly up to them hot and heavy, as James Hogan, owner of the chestnut gelding, has expressed his willingness to make the event a four-cornered one, and immediately post his forfeit money with Secretary Charley Jewett of the Breeders' Association.

As Snyder McGregor's record is a second slower than Sweet Marie's and three-quarters less than the two geldings, there is a possibility that his $2,500 will look so good to the three already matched that Hogan will be granted his wish. Notwithstanding his record, however, his turf career shows him to be a dangerous horse in any company.

For the two other races on the programme on July 4, Mr. Jewett has decided to open a 2:14 class for trotters and a 2:10 class for pacers.

THREE HOLY CROSS MEN FOR PILGRIMS

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, June 19.—The Boston American baseball team will have three of the Holy Cross players on its payroll this season, Captain Flynn, the six foot first baseman and captain of the team, having conferred with Owner John Taylor relative to signing with the team, this morning. The announcement came as a surprise to his fellow players, as Flynn was to have joined the Toronto team today at Jersey City, where a contract was also to have been signed. Captain Flynn announced last evening that the terms offered would in all probability be acceptable and that he would probably sign. Hoey and Carrigan also signed contracts with the Americans this morning.

Flynn, who is a Providence boy and but 19 years of age, has been a member of the Holy Cross team for four years and has played a decidedly fast game. This season he has proved by far the best first baseman ever developed at Holy Cross, and throughout the season he has played practically an errorless game. During the past four weeks he has especially distinguished himself by his batting.

Hoey is a member of the junior class. He is one of the best known college players in the state, hails from Watertown and is 24 years of age. His work both in the field and at the bat have been such that old rooters of the college who have followed the Holy Cross nines for many years have rated Hoey as the fastest fielder and hardest hitting batter that the college has ever turned out with the possible exception of the well-known Indian, Sockalexis. This season he has broken all records held by Holy Cross batsmen, and for a time wielded the stick for an average of .510, while he has played an almost errorless fielding game.

Carrigan proved his ability as a ball player last season, when he made an excellent record behind the plate. He has proved particularly strong in base throwing, allowing but few stolen bases all season.

HARNESS HORSE NOTES.

The Belfast, Me., horseman, W. H. Gentnes, has bought of Charley Dean of Chicago two fast pacers, Dorcas H., 2:09¼, and the promising green gelding Nick Longworth, with a trial of 2:13. The price paid was $4,000. They will be raced in New England by Gentner's son.

* * *

One of the officials of the Worcester Driving Club informed a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that there would probably not be racing this year at Greendale Park. A motion is to be put at the next business meeting of the organization to appropriate funds for the members to attend the Island Park meeting the latter part of next month. If they cannot enjoy the sport at home, it is possible to have the fun by going to Albany.

* * *

Ollie Woodard has been on the sick list for a couple of weeks. The doctor now declares that he will be able to get to the Dover, N. H., meeting the first week in July, and Ollie is happy over the prospect.

The speed committee of the Boston Gentlemen's Driving Club received all kinds of complimentary remarks for the wisdom they displayed in matching the horses in the opening matinee at Readville. They were not in any way at fault for Ethel's Pride not starting.

YALE NINE TO PRACTICE HERE TO-MORROW

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 19.—Yale's baseball players left here this afternoon for Boston, to tackle Harvard at the class day game on Thursday. The nine has been bounding into first-class trim since it was walloped in two straight games by Princeton, and is confident of taking two straight from Harvard.

Pitcher Parsons is in perfect form, and Yale men are betting that he will not allow Harvard more than three hits. It has been decided to keep Tad Jones behind the bat, and the old pitcher, Fielding Jackson, on first base. The team will tackle Harvard just as it met Princeton in the last match. The players will go to the Stadium to-morrow and practice two hours to get accustomed to the diamond and sun field.

The boys will return here Friday and practice for the second game of the Harvard series, which is scheduled for next Tuesday. The Yale and Harvard managers have completed plans for playing off their tie if one is necessary. They will engage the American League Park, New York City, for the match, which will be played next week Saturday, in case of a tie in the series.

PITCHER NOPS IS SUSPENDED.

PROVIDENCE, June 19.—Harry Nops, pitcher for the Providence base ball team in the Eastern League, has been suspended for the remainder of the season for continually absenting himself without leave.

HOLY CROSS ELECTS CASHEN

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, June 19.—George Cashen, 1908, of Fostoria, has been unanimously elected captain of the Holy Cross team for next year. He is one of the most popular men in the college and has been a regular member of the team for the past two years. He has shown up exceptionally well at second base and was one of the most consistent fielders on this year's strong nine. Beside covering his territory in superb shape he is a batter of ability, and has proven to be a reliable hitter at critical times with men on bases. He is the first freshman in several years to be elected captain.

HOW TO SAVE THE BABY

THE BOSTON AMERICAN presents to-day the second article in its series of articles advising New England mothers on "How to Save the Babies."

If mothers will study carefully the plans here outlined for feeding their babies, many of the deaths that would otherwise be recorded before the end of the Summer may be avoided.

It should be so impressed upon every mother that she cannot forget it that it is actually criminal to deprive her baby of its natural food during the hot months unless it is positively necessary, and a physician should be the judge.

If the child is more than nine months old, it is possible that the strain upon the mother may be too great. In that case the weaning should have been done earlier, when the babe was about six months old.

Weaning should be done gradually. Sudden weaning is apt to cause serious illness of the infant. It is wise in every mother, during the fifth or sixth month, to teach the child to take food and water from the bottle. Then when the time comes to deprive it of its natural food there will not be the fretting and nerve-irritating effect that would follow a sudden change.

A Timely Warning

The Illinois State Board of Health says:

"Artificial feeding should be adopted when the mother is unable to nurse; when the infant is unable to nurse, when the milk continues to disagree with the infant, when the milk supply remains insufficient, when the health of the infant or mother calls for weaning and when the milk does not contain sufficient nourishment for the baby."

When the milk is good in quality but insufficient in quantity it is better to "help the mother out" by giving the baby some artificial food in addition to the natural milk. This should also be done at the beginning of weaning.

Briefly, when the mother is not ill and the milk is merely deficient in quantity or quality, it is better for the child to have both natural milk and artificial food. When the mother suffers from disease which impairs the healthfulness of the milk artificial food alone must be adopted.

The baby who can have natural food in addition to the artificial food will do better than if dependent upon artificial food alone. If possible feed the baby natural milk, if no oftener than thrice a day.

The Best Substitute

If properly diluted and mixed, cow's milk is the best substitute for mother's milk. However, there are certain changes which take place in cow's milk soon after it is drawn. These changes become greater and greater until after twenty-four hours it is not safe to use the milk. The fresher the milk, the more easily it is digested by the babe.

Milk bottled at the dairy is much safer than that which is distributed from cans. In diluting the milk for the baby, use either pure water or barley or oatmeal water. Children approaching one year of age may take beef or mutton broths as diluents.

Remember that the most important item is that the cow's milk be fresh and clean. Milk absorbs impurities with avidity and if left uncovered in dirty surroundings will become unfit for food.

If the milk has been kept perfectly clean and cool after being drawn it needs no sterilizing, but if you have to choose between milk with a tendency toward souring or cooked milk, by all means, choose the latter, although it is harder to digest than raw milk and its food value is lessened by the cooking.

Among the poor, condensed milk is more often used than fresh milk, and because condensed milk babies are often fat, it is supposed to be an excellent food. That is not true, for a fat baby is not always a healthy one.

Condensed milk is easily digested by very young or frail babies, but does not contain fat enough for a steady diet.

Statistics show that practically every baby raised on condensed milk shows signs of rickets or some other disease. The State Board of Health makes this statement and advises that condensed milk never be given without the addition of fats—fresh cream if possible—but in the absence of fresh cream, cod liver oil may be given, five to twenty drops at each feeding. If you use condensed milk, get the best.

There are other artificial foods on the market, and eminent opinions differ upon their value. However, if they are used they should not be used alone, but should be mixed with diluted cow's milk.

How to Mix Milk

In mixing the milk for a child of about three months, use milk sugar, three ounces; lime water, one ounce and enough hot water to make twenty ounces. After the milk sugar is dissolved add three to seven ounces of the upper half of the bottle of milk.

A mixture of three parts of good milk with one part of cream will be the same as the upper portion of a bottle of milk which has been standing. More milk can be used in the mixture each month until by the time the child is ten months old twenty ounces of upper half milk is added.

The food should be mixed in the morning for the entire day, placed in bottles, enough for a feeding in each bottle, and put on ice. If the mother cannot have so many bottles, place it in a covered jar upon the ice.

In feeding the babe artificially, like everything else, good sense and judgment must be used. No rule can be applied to all babies. If the food tried does not agree with the child, try another until the right strength and character of food is established. If your baby is delicate, take a physician's advice always in reaching this result.

Other articles on the care of the baby will follow.

Whatever You Do Be Pleasant and Gracious About It

By Beatrice Fairfax

FRIENDLINESS is a very charming quality.

It is a great mistake to shut one's self up like an oyster and never turn a friendly face to the world.

I traveled once in Europe with a delightful old lady who made friends wherever we went. She made any number of pleasant acquaintances, and a good many lasting friendships.

"My dear," she used to say, "the world is full of pleasant people. I mean to know as many of them as I can. You can always learn something from everybody." And so she went on her way, leaving a gracious, kindly impression wherever she went.

I do not think it is wise to rush into violent friendships with every one you meet, but I think it a great mistake not to be on friendly terms with those with whom you come in contact.

There are certain people you meet every day either in a business or social way. It is much wiser to make friends of them than to be merely on terms of cold civility.

Show them any little favor or courtesy you are able to. You never can tell when you may need a return kindness from them.

That is of course putting things on rather a sordid basis, but all the same it is wisdom.

As you go through life you will find that if you want people to like you you must do something to earn their regard.

Those who make themselves lovable are the ones who win love.

When a favor is shown you accept it graciously.

A young man wrote me the other day saying that seeing an elderly woman taking shelter in a doorway during a storm, he offered her his umbrella.

That woman was a bad reader of character—she could not tell the difference between courtesy and impertinence.

"She refused," he said, "in a way that showed she thought my offer an impertinence."

A woman of any intelligence should be able to know when a man is trying to be kind to her and when he is trying to be familiar. Very often an action that is intended to be merely friendly is misread.

As my friend said, you can learn something from everybody. The only way you can do so is by bringing out the best that is in people, and it is only through friendliness that you can do that.

If you have moods that are morose and unsociable you must go off by yourself and fight it out.

Don't impose your ugly moods on other people. They will soon get sick of you if you do.

A pleasant morning greeting to your business associates is never wasted. A smile is more becoming than a frown.

Coldness of manner is never attractive, neither is indifference.

People like cordiality and appreciation, and give them both if you would win their regard.

A friendly, gracious disposition shows in the face, and the man or woman who possesses it is very fortunate.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

IS IT JEALOUSY?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady nineteen years old and am deeply in love with two young men. Now, Miss Fairfax, I have two other girl friends who jolly these fellows, but do not care for them, and I believe these fellows like them better than they do me. Could you kindly tell me how I could find out who they care for the most?

K. D. N.

YOU certainly are not in love with both young men, so why not be good friends. Go around and have a jolly time without questioning their attitude to the other girls. If either of them have any serious regard for you, you will very soon find it out.

AN EXCEPTIONAL CASE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

At the church where I attend on Sundays I am very much interested in one of the ushers, who seems to have a very congenial way about him and very pleasing eyes. I have admired him for about a year, and have had occasion to meet him quite by accident on the street and in cars. Recently, as I was about to board a train, he was about to do likewise, and we came face to face with each other. I have always bowed and thanked him for his courtesy in finding me a seat while at church, but have never been introduced to him outside of church. This morning as we were about to go on the cars he looked very pleasant, and I took the initiative and bowed, because I rather expected that he wished me to recognize him. He raised his hat, and when I was seated in the car he walked up to where I was and asked if I had any objection if he rode along with me. I said I would be simply delighted to have company, as I was bound for New Haven. He only went as far as Stamford, and as he was about to leave the train he remarked how much he enjoyed my company. I told him I could return the compliment, and was just about to ask him to call and see me when I thought it would not be quite proper, as I was never introduced. When I returned from New Haven I bowed to him again in church and he returned the recognition.

Is there any possible way you could suggest for me to become better acquainted with this young man? He seems to be such a delightful young fellow, and I certainly would like to see him quite often and have him call at my home. I really do not know of anyone who could introduce me. Would you kindly tell me what course to pursue, and whether it would be better not to recognize him outside of church again, notwithstanding the fact that he sat next to me all the way up in the train to Stamford the day I went to New Haven?

J. K.

I WOULD not, as a rule, advise a girl to seek acquaintance with a man to whom she had not been properly introduced, but your case is slightly different. You have practically grown to know him through thanking him for his courtesies toward you in church. Speak to him in a friendly way when next you meet, and if he cares to continue the friendship he will be encouraged to do so.

AN ABUSED WIFE

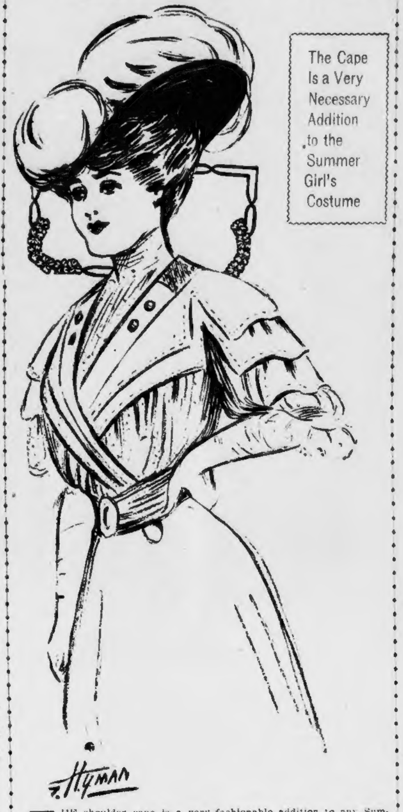
DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Kindly let me know if you think it proper for a husband earning $20 per week to give his wife half of it to pay rent and furniture and clothe herself and he sport the balance and give her no pleasure at all?

A CONSTANT READER.

I CERTAINLY think if your husband keeps half of his salary for pleasures he should share them with you. If he does not care to do this he should give you a share of it with which to amuse yourself.

SHOULDER CAPE IS HEIGHT OF FASHION



The Cape Is a Very Necessary Addition to the Summer Girl's Costume

THE shoulder cape is a very fashionable addition to any Summer costume, and it may be made either of the same material as the gown or of fancy silk or rows of flowered ribbon and lace joined together.

The latter is a pretty fashion and makes the cape a useful garment, which may be worn with several costumes.

Insomnia Can't Be Cured Unless the Sufferer Removes Its Cause

By Dr. Joseph Cater

SLEEPLESSNESS may be merely a symptom attending some morbid condition. If so, it will become less assertive as the person recovers from his ailment.

Pain, for instance, may be so severe as to prevent sleep, because both sensation and will power are kept in action. The full supply of blood is drawn to the brain to support the activity of its cells. In this case two causes of insomnia are operating.

Similarly, a great rise of temperature, as in fevers; a persistent cough, as in consumption; a severe headache, as in cerebral tumor; or difficulty in breathing, as in asthma, are obviously causes of sleeplessness.

Under such conditions, insomnia is the effect of a definite and distinct cause. When that cause is removed, sleep is no longer sought in vain.

Intense anxiety about events beyond our control, or dependent upon chance, as hazardous speculation or financial embarrassment, produce similar results.

From these and kindred causes the anemic brain condition necessary to healthy sleep is lacking, and the untimely activity of the thinking apparatus prevents our becoming unconscious.

From the facts set forth it may be deduced that the treatment of insomnia largely consists in discovering and eliminating its cause.

In the majority of cases it is not so much the quantity of work as the worry connecting with it that causes insomnia.

Fixed hours for retiring and rising are immensely helpful. To lie in bed in the morning is no remedy for insomnia the previous night; rather is it a means of promoting its recurrence each successive night.

The demand of nature regularly responded to is more likely to induce a habit of sleeping at about the same hour every day. Like the appetite of hunger, which asserts itself at regular times, because it is accustomed to be satisfied at those hours, so will it be with sleep.

Bodily exercise of a brisk nature in the open air invariably conduces to natural sleep, carriage exercise certainly is something, but cycling is better, walking is better still, and riding a horse is best of all.

The bed clothing should be adapted to the temperature; the sleeping apartment should be well ventilated; and the last meal of the day ought not to approach too nearly the hour of rest.

These apparently trifling matters are all factors in the causation of insomnia. When they are properly adjusted, and no removable cause for sleeplessness can be detected, it is wiser to consult a physician than to dose with injurious and dangerous drugs.

Nearly all the measures commonly recommended to bad sleepers are as absurd as they are useless, because they leave the cause of the insomnia untouched. Some of them may draw blood away from the brain to some other active part; but beyond this their value as remedies for insomnia is absolutely nil.

"SHADOWS OF NEW YORK"

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

HE made it his business to cultivate the friendliest relations with the police, though he was by no means unaware that they had cast a suspicious eye in his direction more than once. But, as he argued philosophically, it is the business of the police to suspect anybody, and, after all, suspicions hurt nobody.

Mr. Rumfit left nothing to chance. When he purchased a little parcel of jewelry about which there might be any unpleasant inquiries he made it his invariable rule to reset the stones and pop the gold setting into the melting pot at once, even if he sat up half the night to do it.

After that, who was to recognize the goods? And as Mr. Rumfit was a licensed dealer in gold and precious stones, there was nothing remarkable even if a good many loose stones should be found in his possession.

The stones would be remounted, and then, when a sufficient stock was accumulated, some such advertisement as this would appear one day in a local paper in Chicago:

"An old established firm of manufacturing jewellers, desirous of realizing upon the surplus portion of their enormous stock, have instructed Messrs. Jones & Co., auctioneers of this town, to sell without reserve a large selection of high-class jewelry, etc."

With regard to the watches that came to Mr. Rumfit in the course of his peculiar trade, these would first be doctored out of recognition by the number and name on the plate and other marks by which the watch would be reported to the police as being stolen being erased and a new name and number substituted.

These, with other "doctored" articles, would be entrusted to an agent holding an auctioneer's license, who would conduct small auction sales in various parts of the country.

CHAPTER L.

Mr. Rumfit's Other Visitor

SHORTLY after half past nine that morning Mrs. Rumfit went to the door of Olga's room and invited her to "get up, my dear, and come down to breakfast," as she unlocked the door.

The woman spoke in her silkiest tones. In her conciliatory attitude Olga read evidence of the eagerness of these people to win her over to their proposals.

Olga had already been awake some hours. She felt refreshed from her rest, and there was a gleam of hope in her mind that lightened her spirits. She had already given Jim instructions as to his errand.

The boy had spoken to her through the partition wall while Mrs. Rumfit was still snoring peacefully. Hurriedly Olga had told him how to reach John Herries's place.

"My only fear is that in consequence of his accident last night in the car he may not be at home, though I heard the policeman say that his injuries were trifling."

"You trust me, miss, to find him wherever he is—I'm as fly as any District Messenger, never you fear!" the lad answered. "I shall jest skip school this morning; I go to school in the mornings, you know, miss; the old woman grumbles at it—says it's shockin' waste o' time, when I could be makin' myself useful at home, but she wasn't artful enough to git over the Truant Inspector, though!"

Jim had gone downstairs and stolen an envelope and sheet of paper for her which he thrust under her door. Olga hastily pencilled her note to John Herries, and pushed it back to the boy with the few quarters she had in her possession, praying that Jim might be successful in the errand.

Jim had already gone when Olga came downstairs. She found Mrs. Rumfit alone.

Police on Watch

The fat man was in the inner sanctum off the shop in conclave with a caller with something to sell. For in spite of his assertion to the morning's first visitor that he was "not buying anything to-day," Daddy Rumfit had apparently changed his mind, with the advent of a man with a military-looking mustache, who had sauntered, as if quite casually, into the shop.

"I don't think you have been here before, have you?" said Mr. Rumfit, as in the case of the former visitor; it seemed to be his stereotyped formula.

"No, but I have a few rather special things to sell. Mr. Farmer said if I mentioned his name——"

It was curious how different Mr. Rumfit's manner was toward customers who came with an introduction.

"That's all right. If you've got the things with you I'll look at 'em. Come inside here," and he led the caller into his private room quite briskly.

Mrs. Rumfit greeted Olga effusively, would even have kissed her, but for the girl's quick gesture as she drew back with a gleam in her eyes.

"Oh, my dear, you 'ave reason to be thankful that you ran into the arms of them as was willin' to befriend you last night!" observed Mrs. Rumfit, with much assumption of heartiness, watching the girl narrowly as she spoke. "Now you mustn't let what I'm going to tell you spoil your appetite for breakfast—but it seems you was seen in the neighborhood last night an' some one's warned the police, my poor dear!"

Mrs. Rumfit paused impressively. "I 'ear the police are keepin' a pretty close watch in the neighborhood," she went on, as Olga did not speak, "so it won't be safe for you to as much as poke your nose outside the shop door. But they'll never suspect us of harborin' you. An' all you've got to do is to stay quiet at 'ome 'ere with them as'll stick by yer if only you'll stick by them and enjoy yourself."

Mother Rumfit wished to make her realize how completely she was in their power, and that if she remained persistently obdurate they would retaliate by betraying her to the police.

Trouble for Jim

All that morning Olga waited in feverish impatience for the boy's return. Would he have succeeded in seeing John Herries? The more she thought of it the less hopeful she became.

Jim's non-appearance at dinner time provoked wrathful comments from Mrs. Rumfit.

"The times I've told that boy to come straight 'ome from school! When he stays away like this you never know what bad companions he mayn't picked up with as 'll lead 'im astray!"

It was a little before two when Jim came racing round the corner full pelt, looking as innocent as though he was hurrying promptly home from school, and in his haste almost running into a man who was walking leisurely toward the shop door from the other direction.

The next that Jim knew a heavy hand fell on his shoulder, and he was sent staggering for a yard or two.

"All right. Keep yer hair on! Didn't run yer down a purpose!" protested Jim, resentfully, only just managing to preserve his balance. "I ain't a punchin' bag."

The boy paused abruptly as he turned and saw the man from whom he had received this rough treatment. It was curious the change that instantly came over his face. A swift look of fear crossed it, as he recognized the man, and almost instinctively he flung up an arm as though he expected a blow.

HOW MRS. ROOSEVELT MAKES SPICE CAKES

ONE cup of butter, two cups sugar, one cup milk, four eggs, four cups flour, two teaspoonfuls Royal baking powder, one teaspoonful ground cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful nutmeg.

Mix the butter and sugar together until they are of a creamy consistency, then add the yolks of the eggs, which have been well beaten. Pour in the milk slowly, beating all together.

Mix the baking powder well with the flour and then sift it slowly into the sugar, milk, butter and eggs, making a smooth batter; beat the whites of the eggs thoroughly and beat into the batter; last of all, add the cinnamon flavoring. Pour into buttered tins and bake in a quick oven.

WOMEN SHOULD BE WOMANLY

THE diversions and athletics of the modern society woman smack too strongly of abandon. It is well enough for women to indulge in moderation in out-of-door sports and recreation; it is not, however, necessary that they should devote so much time to making "records," winning "championships," or in neck and neck competitions with men in the manly sports.

People of the old school cannot refrain from dreading the unfavorable effect on the next generation of automobiling, yachting, fencing and the present strenuous life of some women.

Let the leisure class cultivate greater veneration for holy things, insist upon less dissipation of every kind, less display and extravagant dress, and more respect for industry, and we shall see women stronger morally, more interested in elevating pursuits and less given over to frivolities.

Whence Comes the Craze for Monograms?

IS it because we are afraid our possessions will be seized from our very hands and run away with, or because we are so distressingly anxious to blazon our identity abroad, that we have adopted this craze for adorning everything we wear or carry with a large splashing monogram?

Behold it upon the parasol for 1906 in letters a good six inches long. A sunshade of pale blue linen, with blue stock and tassel, has an immense monogram worked in white mercerized linen, on one section, down near the edge. The white on blue is pretty, but one wonders its raison de'etre.

With monograms on our shoe buckles, our stockings, our handbags, our blouse fronts, and now on our umbrellas, there certainly can be no mistake as to who we are!

BIG CROWD SEES CIRCUS OPEN IN ALL ITS GLORY

Watches Five Shows at Once and Cheers Hub Girl Who Does "Dip of Death."

NEW FEATURES MAKE HITS

By Morton Birge.

A BOSTON circus audience was thrilled as it never was before by Miss Isabelle Butler's spectacular automobile somersault in the "Dip of Death," which brings Barnum & Bailey's circus to a sensational finish.

After a long programme on the opening day yesterday, in which the eyes grew tired as usual with the effort to look in five places at once, the entire audience centred its attention on the middle of the arena, where a pretty American girl—a Greater Boston girl at that—was to take her perilous ride.

It was noticeable that while Miss Butler was being hauled up in her pulley chair to the top of the "Dip of Death" mechanism and while she was being strapped in her automobile and was perched on the verge of her descent, the audience held its breath. The main tent was packed, nearly every seat being taken. But the place was very still.

There was sharp query from the ringmaster: "Are you ready?"

"Toot—toot!" went the horn on Miss Butler's automobile. She was "ready."

Then the auto shot down the outer circumference of the lofty circle, whirled up the under side, shot through the air, turning over as it flew, hit the curved runway fair and true on the farther side of the ground space, and, right side up with care, came spinning down the second curved pathway to the ground. It's a hard act to describe, but it's easier to tell about it than to do it.

Whirlwind of Applause.

The audience had applauded variously throughout the show—men, women, clowns and animals, horses particularly, receiving much praise. But, as Miss Butler smiled up at her onlookers from the auto after the finish of her really thrilling act, there was a whirlwind of hand-clapping for her. The American audience likes nerve and danger, and when a pretty young woman shows the one in facing the other, it is not slow to applaud.

After it was all over and it was seen that Miss Butler wasn't killed, some comments could be heard to the effect that it was all scientifically planned and there wasn't any danger, anyhow, and, of course, it was exciting, but, then—etc., etc.

But if there is a man, woman or child in the audience who wants to ride the "Dip of Death" and be Miss Butler's understudy, why the circus management simply "Comes from Missouri," and you've got to show them. They haven't found such a volunteer yet, so they say, and it looks likely.

There isn't a poor act in Barnum & Bailey's Circus after its three years' absence from Boston. It's a circus—of course, like many the old folks have seen time and again. But there are new features. There is a fine precision and hustle to the acts, and even the old-timers in the audience seemed pleased as of yore. As for the kids, you could hear squeal on squeal of childish laughter and wonder rising from all sides.

Acts Make Words Good.

The programme shows seventeen acts, with some three to five parts in every act. The publicity man in the programme persists in pressing statements that every act is an alliterative aggregation of amazing and alluring accomplishments, actually and absolutely alone in artful achievement. Just so.

But the audience had a good time, despite the adjectives. The Peace spectacle at the start, representing the nations of the earth trying to harmonize Russia and Japan, is a dignified pageant. This is followed by the accustomed bewildering variety of acts on three rings and two platforms.

In the horsemanship exhibits the trained horse "Graceful," ridden by Ray Thompson, the veteran rider, aroused the major applause. The beautiful brute galloped, paced, waltzed, two-stepped and did every kind of prance known to a horse up and down the arena, keeping perfect time and showing such an equine appreciation of what was expected of him that he was clapped again and again.

In the acrobatic feats the Imperial Viennese Troupe, performing over the centre ring on aerial trapezes, seemed to be the favorites. Though they used a net to avoid accident, their acts at that were clever and daring enough to hold the undivided attention of the big audience.

In the hippodrome races one of the riders on the four-horse tandem bareback race was thrown or lost his footing or something as his horses dashed around the first turn. The horses ran free down the length of the course, and there was a bit of extra dash and zest put into an already spirited turn.

Clowns Do New Tricks.

Yokichi, who climbs up a high-slanting rope on his tippy-toes and then slides down backwards, does his turn cleverly. Another act that was thought pretty difficult by the audience, judging by the hand given, was that of the seven Rowlandes, who drove into the centre ring on a two-horse brake and proceeded to jump from the seats to the horses' backs and back again, up on one another's shoulders, and do various ground and lofty stunts, while the horses were keeping up their trained trot about the ring.

The clowns were full of fun and had new tricks to raise the laugh. They tickled the children immensely and had parodies on some of the straight acts that were timely.

The animal tent, of course, held its own during the hour preliminary to the big show. The lions, tigers, the row of big, bigger and biggest elephants, the baby camel, the hippo, the rhino and all the other circus brutes were variously admired or wondered at.

It is a good circus. Only, when it's over, take your time coming out. Else you'll be caught in the jam and will emerge from the tent knowing how a canned sardine feels.

Over three-quarters of the teachers now being voted for in the BOSTON AMERICAN'S great European Tour Election received votes yesterday. Although the contest is in its last week, there has been no let-up in the voting, for every teacher is anxious to hold her position, wherever it may be, until the final voting comes next Monday.

With a gain of an even 4,000 votes by Miss Katherine Y. Prescott of the Reddington Street School in Swampscott, every teacher in the Grand Tour and European Tour classes of the Boston and Metropolitan divisions now has over 200,000 votes. Miss Prescott, who is to-day No. 5 in the European Tour list, has 201,152 votes, while yesterday she held the same place with but 197,152.

While the gain was general through the entire list, none were by very large numbers. Miss Kate Roud of the Washington School, Boston, made the largest advance, scoring over 10,000 votes, and displacing Miss W. May Nash of the Harvard School, Cambridge, for eighth place in the Shakespearian Tour list.

Next in line, as regards largest gains, was Miss Mary T. Ronan of the Bradstreet Avenue School, Beachmont, who is today third in the list of Metropolitan district teachers outside the tour classes. Her gain placed her over Miss Sophie G. Thayer of the James Otis School, East Boston, and Miss Addie R. Crosman of the Prospect School, in Wakefield.

Miss Margaret F. G. Lee of the Sycamore School, Worcester, is to-day only 2,000 votes short of a place in the winning list in Massachusetts, as a result of a gain of nearly 6,000 votes made by her in yesterday's voting. Her nearest competitor is Miss Nellie G. Connors of the Perkins School, Brockton, who has 287,218 votes, while Miss Lee is credited with 285,112.

Seven days more, including to-day, now remain in which to vote. The contest closes Monday night. There should be no relaxation in the voting, for at the closing days a good position in the list means much.

Just one word to ALL CONTESTANTS. Question has been raised as to the marking of all coupons sent in during the last days of the contests. NO VOTES WILL BE COUNTED WHICH DO NOT BEAR THE NAME OF THE CANDIDATE PLAINLY WRITTEN OR STAMPED ON THE COUPONS.

CANDIDATES AND THEIR STANDING FOR THE TOURS

The winners of the $1,000 will be the six teachers having the highest individual totals at the end, regardless of the division in which they are located.

The winners of the $500 in cash "consolation awards" will be the ten teachers polling the highest totals and failing to win tours:

DO WORKMEN NEED SPECIAL TRAINING FOR POLITICS ?

Possibly—But We Doubt It. Common Sense AND A DEMOCRATIC SPIRIT Make the Useful Office-holders

A friend—he is at the same time a printer, a member of the union and a student of law—writes as follows:

"You desire labor men to enter politics. So do I.

"Why not give them a chance to learn more of our form of government and other things necessary to take up their new role by publishing each day a short article written by specialists?"

Our friend goes on to suggest the publication of a series of articles on Municipal Ownership, National Ownership, the American System of Government, etc.

It could do no harm to print regularly simple, unpretentious articles on the American system of government.

But it seems to this newspaper more important to devote space to the events of the day, and to discussion of those events as they affect our readers, than to take up any regular course of political school teaching.

We would advise every union workingman to read, as a matter of course, Bryce's "American Commonwealth." It can be got at every library. It gives plainly and exhaustively an accurate idea of the American government machine.

But we advise workingmen TO GET INTO POLITICS WITH THEIR PRESENT SUPPLY OF INFORMATION and not, by any means, to wait until they are "better educated."

The ordinary workingman knows quite enough about this government and about the American idea to sit in any American lawmaking body.

The ordinary man carrying a hod up a ladder is a great deal better fitted to vote on national matters than ninety-nine one-hundredths of those who sit in the Senate of the United States. Read David Graham Phillips in this month's Cosmopolitan Magazine for proof of that.

Every workman knows THAT THE MAJORITY SHOULD RULE and the majority's interests be first considered.

Every workman faithful to the voters would try to prevent a few from dishonestly exploiting the many. And that is more than the Senate and House of Representatives do at present. For proof of that we again refer you to Phillips's articles on "The Treason of the Senate" in the Cosmopolitan.

Every workingman would say by his vote, "I am sick of having the railroads own the country and, therefore, I vote to have the country own the railroads."

Every workingman knows by bitter experience that premature hard labor grinds the lives out of children, deprives their fathers and mothers of fair wages AND THREATENS THE COMING GENERATION.

It would not take any course in the art of government to make an honest workman elected to office fight the child-labor system.

Every workman knows enough to fight a system by which the tariff, railroad rebates and criminal conspiracies combine to make extortionate trusts impregnable.

Workmen, think on the questions of the day. REALIZE THAT THERE IS NOTHING COMPLICATED, DEEP OR MYSTERIOUS ABOUT WHAT OUR NATIONAL GOVERNMENT REALLY OUGHT TO BE.

Go into politics. Run for office, elect your fellows to office. TRUST one another. VOTE for one another.

DON'T GO ON FOREVER BEING USED BEFORE ELECTION AND LAUGHED AT AFTER ELECTION.

ATTORNEY CLARK'S EVIDENCE LEADS TO THE SENATE, ALSO

It Appears That Hilton, of Overtime Bill Fame, ALSO Offered One of the J. J. Quinlan Amendments, Another Thing That Would Have Been Followed Up in a Public Hearing

Isaiah R. Clark, attorney for J. J. Quinlan & Co., "brokers," testified before the Legislative "investigating" committee that he drew three amendments to the anti-bucket shop bill, in the interest of his clients. Two of them he identified as those offered in the House by Representatives Brigham and Hoyle. The committee hastily stopped examining him before he had the chance to tell anything about the third.

Representative Brigham says he does not know Mr. Clark, and that he personally drew the amendment he offered, copying it from the one Senator Hilton introduced in the upper branch of the Legislature.

This casts more and interesting light upon the subject. Wherever Mr. Brigham may have got the Quinlan amendment, it appears from this that SENATOR HILTON ALSO OFFERED IT.

You remember Senator Hilton. He is our old friend of the Overtime Bill, who absented himself when that bill was to be killed for the benefit of the textile lobby, showed a fake telegram regarding illness at home, and afterward confessed that he himself had planned the scheme in conversation with a "prominent mill man." You will remember, further, that the telegram was signed by an employe of the Boston & Maine Railroad, whose lobby had just come to the assistance of the textile lobby to kill the Overtime Bill.

If the hearing just closed had been a public instead of a secret one, this interesting development would have been cleared up to a greater degree.

Just as soon as it had come out that a bucket shop attorney drew his amendment, Representative Brigham would have demanded to be heard before the committee, and would have said that he merely copied the Hilton amendment.

Then the committee would have had to summon Hilton, or perhaps he would have demanded to be heard—although this is improbable; he didn't demand any hearing after the Overtime Bill expose—and the Lowell enator would have had an opportunity to tell where HE got the document Mr. Clark drafted.

If the trail led still farther, the committee could have followed it, just as the Armstrong committee followed clues in New York.

For that matter, in a PUBLIC hearing the committee could not have excused Mr. C larkso hurriedly, and he would have had an opportunity to tell what became of his THIRD amendment. Representatives Turtle and Quinn of the committee, who introduced two of the three amendments that were not identified by Mr. Clark, have hastened to deny that either of THEM had it, but if the hearing had been public they would probably have had the opportunity of making their denial UNDER OATH.

Many other things now shrouded in mystery would also have been made clear at a PUBLIC hearing. That is perhaps the best reason why it was SECRET.

By the way, Representative Quinn—he is always called "Honest John" and has said that he knows of no improper conduct in the Legislature in the ten years he has been a member—has added to the fund of information that is coming out AFTER the "investigation" is over. He says his amendment was not furnished by Mr. Clark, but that it was GIVEN HIM BY SOMEONE—"it came from honorable and proper custody in the course of proper legislation," is the way he describes its source.

Undoubtedly Mr. Quinn's ten years of honest and honorable service eminently qualify him to distinguish "honorable and proper custody" from the other kind, but wouldn't it be interesting if he would say WHAT that "honorable and proper custody" was and let the public judge.

In an open hearing all these things would be followed up.

What a lot of interesting information is coming out NOW THAT THE INVESTIGATION IS ALL OVEP

WELL, WELL! THEY [illegible] PICKED A WINNER!

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

She Explains to an Uncultured Woman an Easy Method of Securing a Good Education at Home

ALL the way from Stuttgart, Germany, comes the news that the Landtag of Wurttemberg is favorably considering a bill recently introduced in that assembly providing for the compulsory education of laborers. It appears to be a drastic, as well as a thoroughly practical, measure.

Every community, the bill goes on to state, having at least forty male laborers under eighteen years of age, must establish a commercial and trade school and compel the attendance, for three years, of these youths. Separate schools under the same conditions are to be instituted for girls.

The young village hoodlum's occupation will be gone. He will have to work, and where the parental influence is not strong enough to compel him to do this the community and government will step in and make things lively for him.

That no boy under seventeen years of age shall enter saloons is a further provision of a bill destined to work well in a country where there are a large number of thinly populated districts out of the reach or ken of the large cities. The results of such an innovation will be watched with marked interest by the rural portions of the rest of the world, who have always had considerable difficulty in dealing with the immature loafer.—Municipal Journal and Engineer.

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE greatest musical genius of the world, the greatest literary genius, save Shakespeare, has emanated from Germans.

To Germany America owes the first step made in the clearly, decent, modern disposition of the dead, by cremation, instead of the old barbarous and infectious burial method.

Many more progressive ideas we owe to Germany, and the one mentioned above would be well for our Government to consider.

The American nation is doing all in its power to exterminate the germs of contagious disease.

The germ of ignorance is the most pernicious of all microbes. It does more harm in the world than yellow fever, as its victims do not die, but live and breed children to suffer with the same malady.

When ignorance and drink combine, God help humanity.

The government which does not make an effort to prevent the combination is blind to its own best interests.

A woman who was reared without opportunities of education has married a man in good circumstances, and her associates are all her superiors intellectually. She writes me that an article published in this column something over a year ago interested her and she wants its reproduction.

The subject matter of the article will bear repeating, since there are always ambitious readers who may profit by such suggestions.

The woman wants to know how she can gain ideas of correct spelling and grammar without the humiliation of attending school with young children.

Read: Then Write

I WOULD suggest that she procure from a neighboring library some good books of essays. Emerson's works will be admirable for a beginning.

Take the first volume and carefully copy three pages in writing.

When any word is not understood consult the dictionary.

Have a blank book at hand, alphabetically arranged.

Write down the word and its meaning. Read over the written pages and the words in the blank book before beginning the next day's task.

Never allow one day to pass without writing the three pages.

It may be a monotonous task at first for a mind unawakened to the beauty and value of Emerson's works, but after a few weeks it will grow interesting. After a few months the ignorant mind will find itself becoming suffused with the dawnlight of understanding.

Conversing will not be so difficult: words will fall into their proper places and spelling will lose its terrors in writing a letter.

Any one who has taken piano lessons knows how clumsy are the fingers in the beginning, and how, after months of monotonous scales and exercise, there is a day which comes bringing with it sudden facility.

The fingers fall upon the right keys with no volition of the mind, and even after the work is easy.

It will prove the same to the woman who is engaged in the mental work outlined above.

But it must be persistently pursued and not one day allowed to pass without its accomplished task.

Be a Good Listener

TO my correspondent I would urge modesty regarding conversation and attentive listening to others, until her mind develops.

To avoid talking on any subject with which we are not familiar or expressing positive opinions on matters in which we have received no instruction, is an excellent rule to follow for all humanity.

It is one which would benefit the world if pursued by all classes of ignorance.

The skilled dentist has a right to talk about teeth, but he must not lay down the law to the botanist or call him a fool for certain theories the student of the plant world may have on the earth's flora.

So to the woman seeking to overcome ignorance I would urge toleration and attention in listening to others, and respect for their views as one of the most essential qualities of education, while it is the one most rarely encountered among the erudite of the world.

And what is fame? The meanest have their day;
The greatest can but blaze and pass away. POPE.
